Byrnes Faces Problem on OPA, Subsidies

CONGRESSMEN STILL WANT FREE AGENCY

Seek Independent Unit to Handle Civilian Matters, But Approve OWM.

BOTH HOUSES PLEASED

Controversy Still Rages Over Use of Tax Money to Roll Back Prices.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON—James F. Byrnes, new czar of the home front, today faced three immediate problems as he sought to adapt the domestic economy to the urgent war tasks laid down by President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill.

Installed as chairman of a domestic five-man high command and given sweeping authority over all government agencies, the former supreme court justice found these issues on his desk :

1. A powerful drive in and out of congress to scatter the present authority of the office of price administration. The move would place food prices and rationing under Food Administrator Chester C. Davis and petroleum oil and gasoline matters in the hands of Secretary of Interior Harold L Ickes.

2. A controversy over the use of subsidies to lower food prices and roll back the cost of living. Legislation already has been introduced in the senate to forbid such payments to food processors or manufacturers.

3. Continuing congressional pressure for the establishment of an independent agency on civilian problems, despite delegation to Byrnes of responsibility for "the maintenance and stabilization of the civilian economy."

The president's action in naming Byrnes as head of the Office of War Mobilization found general approval in congress, particularly among senate and house members who long have plugged for an economic high-command. It left the foregoing problems to be settled, however.

Rep. Wright Patman (D., Tex.), hailed the president's creation of OWM as an "outstanding move," but said that he would continue

Mansfield Poppy Sale Quota to Be Exceeded by 5,000

Poppies, honoring America's war dead, bloomed profusely on coat lapels in Mansfield today reminiscent of the wild poppies in Flanders Field.

With the present conflict giving a new meaning to these symbolic flowers, Mansfielders will buy 8,000 more poppies this year than ever before. Mrs. Vernon Castor, member of the Legion auxiliary which directs the sale, said today that 20,000 poppies were on sale here.

Originally 15,000 poppies were to be sold in Mansfield but when these had been distributed and many of them sold by 9 last night an additional 5,000 were obtained for today's sale.

A complete canvass of the downtown section will be made by the Boy Scouts and Junior Auxiliary members acting as poppy salesmen today. Thursday and Friday poppies were sold in the industrial plants.

JUDGES REVOLT

Threaten to Cease Issuing Verdicts In Holland.

LONDON —(UP)— Judges in Holland have threatened to cease issuance of verdicts in criminal cases because of conditions in German-operated penal camps in one of which 280 prisoners died in five months, the Dutch News Agency Aneta said today.

Councilmen Study Needs At Airport

Meet for Dinner, Then Make Inspection Tour With Manager.

City councilmen, meeting last night at the Mansfield airport as dinner guests of J. R. Harrington, airport manager, discussed possible improvements at the port to meet the demands of the war and post-war periods. The group viewed new buildings which were erected recently to provide additional facilities at the flight training center.

Several council members expressed surprise at the expension program that has been financed at the airport by Harrington. Approximately $5,000 has been spent at the airport in recent weeks without cost to the city.

Harrington pointed out to council and Major W. J. Locke the advantages of an adequately-equipped airport for the training of army and navy flight students and to prepare the city for the anticipated rapid growth of aviation after the war.

A number of buildings have been moved to the training center during recent months from the abandoned CCC camp, southeast of the city to provide quarters for the flight students and equipment. The airport will receive 54 army flight trainees within a few days and will install a radio range station, more lights for night flying, and parking strips for 20 more planes.

Following last night's session on the airport, council went over legislation scheduled for action at its monthly meeting Tuesday night.

It was learned that council agreed on suspension of the sewer rental charge for the final half of the year and approval of the state highway department's proposal for widening or resurfacing four of the city's principal thoroughfares, Lexington avenue, South Main street, Marion avenue, and a section of Park avenue west near the city limits.

Council gave the sewer rental proposal its first reading at a special meeting two weeks ago and is scheduled to act on it Tuesday night.

Also discussed last night was a proposed $3,000 storm sewer project, including the construction of five small sewer jobs, the purchase of materials for laying police, fire, and traffic signal lines under West Second street, and the purchase of an Addressograph for the city waterworks, sewer, and garbage department.

FARMER KILLED

Huron Resident Dies When Team Runs Away.

NEW LONDON — A prominent Huron county farmer, Harry Sellars, 63, was fatally injured on his farm east of here late yesterday when a team ran away while he was harrowing a field.

Physicians said he suffered internal injuries. He died within five minutes after members of the family found him sprawled on the ground. His wife was first to the scene.

Besides his wife, he is survived by a son, Thomas and a daughter, Mrs. Frances Sengstock, and four grandchildren, all at home.

Funeral services will be conducted at 2 p. m. Monday at the home. Rev. W. H. Mitchell, pastor of the First Methodist church will officiate. Burial will be in Grove street cemetery.

DISBANDED

Youth 'Gestapo' Broken Uy By Order Of Court.

EAST LIVERPOOL—(AP)—Municipal Judge Frank Grosshans today dissolved a week-old "German gestapo," organized by eight teen-aged youths.

The boys told Judge Grosshans they organized the secret society and made membership cards—stamped with swastikas—as a childish prank. But the judge took their joke seriously and called them "unamerican." He dismissed six youths to the custody of their parents and ordered two tried next week by Probate Judge Homer Hammond.

BRITISH SUB LOST

LONDON —(UP)— The loss of the British submarine Regent was announced today in an admiralty communique, which gave no indication of the vessel's theater of operations.

Members of New Office of War Mobilization

President Roosevelt's newly created office of war mobilization, designed to co-ordinate the work of all other bureaus and to streamline the American war effort, is headed by James F. Byrnes, upper right, whose power now is second only to that of the president. Other five members of the OWM pictured, starting from upper left in counter-clockwise direction, are Secretary of Navy Frank Knox, Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson, WPB chief Donald Nelson, Judge Fred M. Vinson, who also assumes Byrnes' former job as chief of the office of economic stabilization, and Harry L. Hopkins, chairman of the munitions assignment board

FILE PAST BIER OF HOMBERGER

Hundreds Pay Respects to Postmaster; Funeral to Be Conducted Monday.

The thousands of Mansfielders who knew him and the scores of others associated with him in a business way began paying final respects today to Herman E. Homberger, Mansfield's postmaster and civic leader, who died yesterday following a stroke.

Hundreds filed past his bier at the Jones Memorial this afternoon. Floral tributes from Mansfielders and friends and business associates in other cities were banked high at the funeral parlors.

Funeral services for the former county treasurer, service-safety director and political leader are to be conducted Monday at the First Presbyterian church at 3:30 p. m. Rev. David N. Roller and officers of Mansfield Commandery No. 21 will be in charge of the service.

The body will remain at the Memorial until 1 p. m. Monday

FORD BURIED

Industrialist's Body Laid to Rest In Mausoleum.

DETROIT — (INS) — The remains of Edsel Ford, president of the world-wide Ford Motor company and the only son of Henry Ford, rested today in a mausoleum at Woodlawn cemetery.

Funeral services yesterday for the 49-year-old industrialist were held in the tiny, oak-paneled chapel of Christ Episcopal church in suburban Grosse Pointe. Only the family, intimate friends and business associates attended.

M'SWEENEY IN

Ex-Congressman Joins The Military Government Service.

COLUMBUS —(AP)— John McSweeney, former congressman, state welfare director and unsuccessful candidate for governor a year ago, entered the armed service today as major in the army's military governor branch. He left for Camp Custer, Mich., for training.

McSweeney, whose home is in Wooster, served with the 37th division during the first World war.

LONG HUNT ENDS

Pair Bound to Grand Jury In 1938 Forgery Cases.

A five-year search by Mansfield police for forgers who passed three checks here in 1938 brought results today when two suspects, Lawrence Burrell and his wife, Stella, of Cleveland were bound to the Richland county grand jury under $1,500 bond each.

The pair was returned to Mansfield last night by City Detectives Lee Remy and Oscar Krupp. Charged with forgery, Burrell pleaded innocent when arraigned this morning before Judge H. H. Schettler, and Mrs. Burrell pleaded guilty. They were to be taken to the county jail later today.

Police said the Burrells, arrested in Cleveland on information provided by Mansfield authorities, passed forged checks for $30, $31, and $24 here in August, 1938. The checks were cashed by three Mansfield business establishments.

GUARD RATION BOOKS

COLUMBUS—(AP)—State highway patrolmen today guarded 1,000,000 No. 3 ration books, the first received here for distribution to Ohioans starting June 7.

THREE HELD IN THEFT SERIES

Trio Face Armed Robbery Charge In Columbus; Two From Richland County.

Held in county jail today were three youths—two from Richland county—facing a series of charges ranging from gasoline theft to armed robbery.

Brought here yesterday from Defiance, where they were arrested on a charge of automobile theft, the trio will probably be turned over to Franklin county authorities at Columbus, Sheriff Frank Robinson said today, where they face the armed robbery charge.

The two Richland county youths are Arthur Bridges, 18, who has lived near Mansfield for a number of years, and Howard James DeWiel, also 18, near Adario The third member of the alleged gang is a 17-year-old youth who gave Hilliard, O., as his home.

All three were arrested in Defiance by state highway pa-

POWER'S IN

Senate Confirms Appointment as OSU Trustee.

COLUMBUS —(AP)— The Ohio senate, voting 26 to 1, confirmed last night the appointment of Don Power, secretary to Gov. John W. Bricker, as a trustee of Ohio State university.

The only dissenting voice was raised by Sen. Maurice W. Lipscher (D., Mahoning) who remarked: "I am rather surprised that we'd take politics into our state university in this time of war."

THOUSANDS TO PAY MEMORIAL DAY TRIBUTES

Join Patriotic Organizations Sunday In Exercises Planned For Cemetery, Lake.

PARADE TO BE HIGHLIGHT

March to Cemetery to Start At 2:15; Rites Planned For Doughboy Monument.

Thousands of Mansfield and Richland county residents will join patriotic organizations Sunday in a Memorial day tribute to the men who have fought to preserve the nation's freedom since the Revolutionary war.

Mansfield's ceremonies, in which most of the city's veterans' and patriotic groups will participate, will reach a climax Sunday afternoon with a parade through the downtown section and to the cemetery, and ceremonies at the cemetery. The parade will move at 2:15 p. m. from Park avenue west and Mulberry street and will proceed to Central park, around the north side of the park to Diamond street, and south on Diamond street to the cemetery.

Author-Farmer Louis Bromfield will speak at special Marine Memorial services at 10:30 a. m Sunday at the Charles Mill boat house. Richland and Ashland county will join in the ceremonies which will be sponsored by the Mansfield Navy Mothers' club A flotilla on the lake will participate in a tribute to the navy, marine, coast guard, and naval reserves. The Madison township high school band will play. Navy Cadets stationed at the Mansfield airport Sea Scouts, and Boy Scouts will participate in the service.

During the morning program, wreaths and veterans' emblems will be placed on graves in the Mansfield cemetery from 10:30 to 11, and there will be a brief service honoring unknown soldier dead at 11 a. m. at the Doughboy monument in Central park.

At noon the church bells will toll and flags will be raised to full mast. Ringing of the old fire bell in Central park at 2 p. m. by Fire Chief C. J. Seeburger will signal assembly for the afternoon services.

The three divisions of the parade have been asked to follow this order of formation:

Division 1 on south side of Park avenue west. Massed colors, grand

FEAR SHORTAGE

Officials See Lack of Butter East of Mississippi.

WASHINGTON — (UP) — Agriculture officials said today that a butter shortage in the majority of states east of the Mississippi river for the next three or four weeks is "an imminent possibility."

The possibility was attributed to the fact that the dairy products marketing administration, an organization buying as a government agent, has been purchasing butter at the rate of 6,000,000 pounds a day this week, and that by Monday its purchases will amount to 20,000,000 pounds daily.

As a result, a spokesman said, no butter is being shipped east of Chicago for public consumption.

CATCH CONVICTS

State Police Shoot Car from Under Oregon Escapers.

SALEM, Ore. —(INS)— Accurate gunfire of Oregon state police brought about the capture today of Doyle C. McCann and Merlyn G. Kensler, two of three armed convicts who escaped from the Oregon penitentiary flax fields Friday by overpowering their guards.

Reports received at state police headquarters in Salem said the convicts had their stolen automobile shot out from under them six miles east of Lyons on the Santiam highway.

OHIOAN KILLED

LAKE CITY, Fla.—(AP)—Oliver Ganbill of Dunkirk, O., petty officer second class, was one of six men killed in the crash of a twin-engined bomber from Lake City naval air station in nearby woods after a routine night flight.

Reports Ships Already Poised To Hit Europe

100 Fortresses Hit Leghorn, Dump 80 Tons of Bombs Upon Foggia.

(By United Press)

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, North Africa — Big American bombers, defying unfavorable weather, blasted the harbor, oil refinery and three ships at the big Italian port of Leghorn and dumped 80 tons of high explosives on Foggia airdrome in record daylight thrusts that carried 200 miles north of Rome.

Communiques said almost 100 Flying Fortresses made the attack Friday on Leghorn, third largest Italian port, in their deepest bomber flight into Italy, while another 40 Liberator bombers attacked Foggia in two waves.

"Great damage" was done by the Flying Fortresses at Leghorn, which is one of the largest and most important oil fields in Italy, a submarine base and naval center, a communique from Allied headquarters said.

No American planes were lost on the flight which encountered little serious opposition as a result of steady blasting of Italian aerial defenses in recent days. Ten Axis fighters were downed.

Other American planes renewed attacks on four Axis airfields in Sicily and gave Pantelleria island its usual daily plastering, while U S Liberators from the Middle East command attacked Foggia airdrome in southern Italy.

In Sicily, U. S. medium bombers and fighter bombers attacked airfields at Sciacca, Castelvetrano, Milo and Borizzo, shooting down 15 German and Italian fighter planes. The bombers accounted for 11 of them, boosting the ten day total of enemy planes destroyed to 398.

"British-based four-engined bombers were idle last night following Thursday night's 1,000-ton raid on the German arms center of Essen, but fleet air arm Albacores destroyed six enemy gunboats and damaged three more in the English channel off the Cherbourg peninsula during the night and a strong force of daylight raiders swept across the channel in daylight this morning.)

The day's main raid was car-

French Coast Gets 'Working Over'; Berlin, Rome In Quandary.

BULLETIN

LONDON —(AP)— A great force of Flying Fortresses raided the continent today, returning in mid-afternoon, flying high and unescorted over the Folkestone area. The Forts came back in several close-flying formations.

(By United Press)

LONDON—The London News-Chronicle said today that every detail has been worked out for an Allied invasion of Europe, British warships already have taken up strategic positions and the opening of a second front is imminent.

The dispatch followed Axis reports that the Allies have concentrated invasion barges in Tunisian harbors within striking distance of Sicily, Sardinia, Pantelleria and southern Italy and that a big Allied convoy, including large troopships, entered the Mediterranean Wednesday.

Premier Benito Mussolini met secretly recently with his fascist party chieftains and mapped plans to defend Sicily and Sardinia "to the end," the Daily Telegraph said.

Other sources reported the Italians were strengthening fortifications, increasing anti-aircraft batteries and improving airdromes on the two island outposts, already under heavy daily bombardment by Allied planes seeking to soften their defense.

The News-Chronicle described the impending invasion and the maintenance of an Allied army on European soil as "the greatest naval operation in history."

"The navy is ready," the dispatch said. "Great 15-inch gun battleships with attendant aircraft carriers, cruisers, destroyers and minesweeper already are at strategic points watching enemy fleets in the Mediterranean, off the Norwegian coast and in the Baltic.

"Every detail of the gigantic operation or operations has been

SIGNPOSTS: Allies Have Ten Rough Roads Leading to Berlin

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON—The Allied march to Berlin may follow one or more—and preferably more—of ten roads, none of them easy.

Some of the enormous difficulties to be expected were outlined today by Col Conrad H Lanza, retired army officer and one of the country's most noted military students, in an article for the authoritative Field Artillery Journal.

The routes he discusses are these: (1) Norway, (2) Denmark and north Germany, (3) northwest Germany and the Dutch coast east of Texel, (4) the Low Countries south of Texel, (5) north France and Brittany, (6) west France south of the Loire, (7) south France, (8) west side of Italy with Sicily, Sardinia and Corsica, (9) the Adriatic and south Italy, and (10) the Aegean sea area.

His estimate of the force needed varies from a comparatively limited number for the seizure of southern Norway to "millions of men" for a campaign through northern and central France. And an invasion of the continent will be really effective, he suggests, only as the result of landings in great force at several points.

"It seems clear," Lanza writes, "that in view of the enemy's strength, an invasion involving

MOP-UP: Yanks Whittle Down Japs Entrenched on Attu Ridge

BULLETIN

WASHINGTON—(AP)—United States troops have captured Fish-Hook ridge, important Japanese stronghold on Attu island, the navy reported today, and the main enemy force on the island is now contained in a mountainous area of only three to four square miles.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON—American troops on Attu today continued their drive to wipe out the two remaining pockets of Japanese resistance on the island by moping up a series of high ridges where the enemy was firmly entrenched.

Two communiques yesterday said that the Americans had liquidated an enemy position on Fish-Hook ridge Thursday, after it had been softened by artillery and mortar fire. From this spot, which is about one and a half miles southwest of Chichagof harbor, the Americans are fighting to clear the Japanese from other high peaks in the vicinity.

Meanwhile, several attacks were reported to be in progress against the enemy force trapped in the Sarana bay area. Here Americans moved ahead along a ridge commanding the area between Lake Cories and Lake Canirca. Another attack is being made against an enemy-held height south of Lake Cories.

The fighting on Attu is largely hand-to-hand combat, the communiques indicated, as it is necessary to drive the enemy from entrenchments at bayonet point. However, Americans are receiving air support whenever the weather makes flying possible. The operations which took place last Wednesday and Thursday were covered by army

World War 2 Honor Roll Sunday

Respectfully the News-Journal tomorrow presents the first list of officers and enlisted men from Richland county who have given their lives in the present war. There are 18 of them. Their names are listed in a Memorial day tribute to their supreme sacrifice for the safety and honor of their country.

The history of Memorial day and the story of its observance through the years in Mansfield are told in another feature in this week's Sunday edition. Though the day, as we know it, is a "Northern" observance the story also turns to the South and tells you when and how the heroes of the confederacy are also honored.

With the navy launching a drive in the Mansfield area Monday to recruit 200 WAVES and SPARS, the News-Journal tomorrow presents a special section containing pictures and stories that describe the activities of the navy and coast guard auxiliaries.

Mansfield Masonry has a history that very nearly parallels the story of the city of Mansfield. You can read it tomorrow and meet some of the outstanding figures who have contributed to the establishment and growth of the Masonic orders in another in the series of features on Mansfield's fraternal organizations.

IN THE CAPITAL-- By Raymond Clapper

STOCKHOLM—Most of the criticism among Swedes of their own government's position regarding the war is related to the German troop trains that are being allowed to run through Sweden carrying German soldiers to and from Norway.

This so-called "leave traffic" is the focus of intense criticism by the opposition, and of hard feelings on the part of the Norwegians against the Swedes. The pressure is so strong that I have found a number of government officials predicting that the German "leave traffic" will be stopped in the next few months.

Clapper

It is hard to know whether such predictions will be fulfilled, because there is a certain timidity in high places here which prevent such action. Unquestionably public sentiment is in favor of ending the traffic. When I was in Gothenburg recently prominent citizens, including local officials, spoke indignantly about it and referred to the traffic as shameful.

Torgny Segerstedt, Sweden's firebrand editor, has criticized the government unmercifully for tolerating this traffic, which the government allowed to go on secretly for some time, beginning after the Norwegians capitulated in the summer of 1940.

The prime minister tried to talk Mr. Segerstedt out of his bitter criticism. That failed. Then the king summoned him. What transpired is a matter of gossip, and it has produced some good anecdotes which may or may not be legendary. Anyway, Segerstedt continued his criticism of the foreign office, particularly of Foreign Minister Christian E. Guenther, who takes it philosophically.

It is a shock, in a neutral country, to see a long train of German soldiers moving twice a day through Sweden, carrying about a thousand troops each trip.

One can understand how officials anxious to keep Sweden out of war hesitated to resist the German demands back in 1940. The Nazis had conquered Norway and were overrunning Europe. They could easily have occupied Sweden, and many people here are still amazed that Hitler omitted to do so. But this is not 1940. Germany is shortening her lines rather than extending them. She is in no position to open a new front in Sweden. It would cost her much more than she could get from it. The Swedes of Gothenburg scoff at the nervousness of Stockholm on this point.

I am convinced that Swedish sentiment is with us. Also that most of the high officials are with us personally. But there is still a fear of the Nazis, which seems now to be explained more by habit than by realities. I have had the explanation offered to me that bureaucratic influences arising out of timidity, perhaps affected by certain earlier backgrounds, account for the discrepancy between the strongly pro-Ally sentiment of the press, the Social Democratic party, labor, and scores of leading citizens I have talked to, on the one hand, and the extremely timid policy of the foreign office on the other.

I cannot be too sure of the explanation, but it seems beyond argument that such a discrepancy exists. In fact, when officials say privately that public pressure will force an end to the German troop traffic, that in itself seems an admission that the government's policy is out of line with popular opinion.

People in Washington who knew Hans Thomsen when he was in the German embassy there will be interested to know that Frau Thomsen has arrived here, where her husband is minister, and that she is criticizing the Nazi at dinner parties as she did in Washington. Apparently the Thomsens are working both sides of the street here just as they did in the United States.

FAIR ENOUGH-- By Westbrook Pegler

SAN DIEGO, Cal.—Joseph Curran, president of the National Maritime Union which faithfully follows the party line, has written me a long letter in reply to my comments on his draft deferment and other matters. He asks that, in fairness, his statement be published and I am delighted to comply, not only because I am very fair, but because he puts up some inviting targets which I will blow down in further essays.

Pegler

Curran, or, perhaps, Victor Weingarten, another bluff sailor who released the letter under the title of assistant public relations director of the union, is very long-winded, however, so I must allow myself the liberty of condensing the letter. As an old-time press association pony editor, I believe I can do this without injury to the truth or injustice of these two old salts.

They say my comments contained several misstatements and omissions and doubt that I will print their version. They say Curran didn't ask deferment and that this was done by the union in his absence. Curran then told the union to ask his draft board to let him serve as a merchant sailor because he is a skilled seaman, and thought he could be more useful at sea. The board, however, did defer him so that he could continue his job of "keeping our merchant ships manned."

They say merchant service messboys do not get $100 a week from the government but $87.50 a month plus $100 a month while at sea. They get no extra pay or bonus in port. They say Admiral Land of the War Shipping Administration says merchant seamen average $57 a week, but themselves insist that unlicensed sailors average only $33 a week, for a maximum of eight months' employment per year. In peace time they "virtually starved, working an average of four to six months."

They say I should have mentioned that 4198 merchant seamen have died "in the service of their country" and the "fact" that the shipowners made a profit of $26,974,176 for 80 trips to the Red sea and the Persian gulf with lend-lease supplies. I am accused of overlooking "the [illegible] WSA has given contracts to the shipowners complete with bonuses and cost-plus clauses which relieve them of all responsibility for delays and poor loading "which have already cost many lives and cargoes because of negligence."

"Under their arrangements," the letter says, "these owners will, just as they did in the last war, receive their vessels for a song."

I am sorry for this jerky style, but I am boiling an awful lot of language of this letter in order to present the arguments in my allotted spread of white paper.

Well, I "omit the fact" that since Pearl Harbor no ship "in our jurisdiction" has been delayed in sailing and that some union sailors have been torpedoed as many as nine times. I "omit the fact" that the NMU replaced other organizations in which racketeers stole the men's money and allowed "no democracy." The NMU makes quarterly financial reports, strikes are called only by referendum and there has been none during the war. Candidates are elected by secret ballot under supervision of the Honest Ballot association and records and pictures of candidates appear in the official publication during campaigns.

I failed to say that the civilian union sailors have to keep their families, buy their clothes, pay taxes and maintain themselves during unemployment on their $33 a week or that WSA allowed the shipowners to write off as overhead $1,200,000 which they gave to the United Seamen's Service, the merchant marine's equivalent of the USO "with much fanfare."

Curran and (or) Weingarten says or say that Curran always favored war against fascism. He was against Mussolini's Ethiopian expedition and Japan's invasion of China and the letter says "we seamen" fought against delivery of scrap to Japan and "were almost jailed" in 1935 when they and Harry Bridges' west coast longshoremen tried to boycott shipments which since have been fired back at our troops. He was in favor of fighting fascism when Franco, with the help of Mussolini and Hitler, used Spain as a trial ground for this war when Czechoslovakia was dismembered "because Chamberlain and the appeaser crowd were busy selling their countries down the river in the hope that Hitler would move east and leave them alone."

"In my opinion," meaning Curran's, "this did not become a people's war until the Soviet Union was attacked and the government of Britain, under Churchill, pledged all of its resources to destroy the Fascist armies. And, even with the efforts of President Roosevelt, Mr. Churchill and the Soviet Union and other United Nations for an all-out war against fascism, there are still some who balk against our collective security program just as [illegible] balked in the days of Spain, China and [illegible]

In closing, the letter says, "I am bringing these things to your attention because I believe an accurate reporter interested in getting the facts would want to know them.

"I am sending this letter to you because during a recent discussion one said if given the facts you would present them."

I believe this condensation does fully present Curran's contentions.

ON BROADWAY-- By Dorothy Kilgallen

For Peter and Ruth.

(For Better or For Worse.

Drama Note: "Ruth Ford, one of our most distinguished young actresses, has returned from Hollywood to the Broadway scene."

Column Item: "Watch the zoom in Peter Van Dyke's career. His magnificent performance in 'The Moon Is Down' has the Hollywood bunch doing handsprings."

Kilgallen

Ruth and Peter are married to each other and deeply in love, and the people of Broadway are fond of them both and wish for them the happily-ever-after kind of life. That's why they are the subject of today's sermon in a space that doesn't usually feature advice to the lovelorn.

The story of Ruth and Peter, up to now, is what the magazines call a short short. Ruth one of Broadway's most competent young actresses, was summoned to Hollywood for a screen test. Peter, a musician, went along for the ride. You know what happened, she came back to the stage he was grabbed up by the movies and he made good at his first try.

It's not an unusual story, but perhaps Peter and Ruth think it is. So here, for them, are a few tales of other career people—and if there seems to be a parable peering out of the paragraphs, it's purely intentional.

The hero of our first saga was a more than fairish song and dance man, a regular on the vaude circuit, who had left the deuce spot far behind. His wife was doing cute song-and-dance routines on the picture circuits, and everyone considered them a nice little couple. Then she got a part in a play, and after that a solid role in Katharine Brush's film "Young Man of Manhattan." She was on the upgrade in the magic cinema world. So what hapened? Ginger Rogers and Jack Pepper had the legal link snapped. That kind of lightning struck twice in Ginger's life. She married Lew Ayers, who was as popular then as Alan Ladd is now, and everything went smoothly until Ginger, matching her swift feet to Fred Astaire's dancing steps, climbed higher than Lew could reach. And that ideal marriage ended.

In that same "Young Man of Manhattan" picture the leading man was gentle Norman Foster, and you remember the reams and reams of movie magazine space on his heavenly life with his beautiful movie wife, Claudette Colbert. But as time went on, Foster's roles became fewer and smaller, while Claudette could step into any starring role she wanted. And maybe's it's just coincidence, but Claudette is now Mrs. Joel Pressman.

Then surely you must know the story of the acid comedian and his Broadway wife. They were part of show business, had its bruises on their shoulders, knew all the angles, could spot a phony a mile away, and were as hep as any Broadwayites could be. They were so wise you'd think that no amount of huffing and puffing could possibly blow down the door of their honeymoon cottage. Until vaudeville collapsed, and until one smart role after another built her into one of the nation's best boxoffice bets.

Maybe it just happened, but what do YOU think ended the marriage of Frank Fay and Barbara Stanwyck.

You see, Peter and Ruth, this could go on for columns and columns. But you get the idea. The idea is that it has happened before and it will happen again wherever the distance between two lovers grows too great. It's hard to hear a heartbeat 3,000 miles away.

Remember that, Ruth and Peter.

ASSEMBLY SET TO CONCLUDE SESSION TODAY

Expected Three Months Work Drags Out to Five With 180 Bills Passed.

(By Associated Press)

COLUMBUS — The 95th Ohio general assembly, which convened Jan. 4 for what many members thought would be a three-month session, sped toward adjournment today after nearly five months' work.

It appeared the lawmakers would complete their work by nightfall, when they plan to recess until June 8, the sine die adjournment date.

This was indicated when Speaker William M. McCulloch of the house told newspaper men: "I intend to set out 24 tomato plants today." He lives in Piqua.

The 94th general assembly quit work on May 16, 1941, and adadjourned sine die May 27.

Of 722 bills introduced in the current session, approximately 180 have been enacted, and a score or more are in the process of enactment.

There still was a possibility of action on a bill to remove the state from central war time to the hour-faster eastern war time. The measure is being held in the senate rules committee, whose members said it would be brought up for a vote in the senate if they received assurance it would be passed by the house.

The house and senate passed 27 bills yesterday and intended to devote today to settlement of disputes over amendments, including those to the $369,116,129 biennial appropriation measure.

Legislation which received final approval yesterday included:

Providing prison sentences for agents and operators of the numbers or policy gambling racket.

Appropriating an additional $2,892,000 to the elementary schools.

Creating a 21-member commission to draft plans for coping with post-war problems.

Requiring the state to provide $80 a year for tuition in any Ohio college for members of the armed forces after the war.

Allowing members of the armed forces to fish, hunt and trap without a license.

Increasing the municipalities' share of utility excise tax revenue allocated for poor relief.

Providing a maximum penalty of a $1,000 fine or seven years' imprisonment for the theft of auto tires, tubes or gasoline during rationing.

Making U. S. citizenship a requirement for holding a civil service position.

DIES IN SOUTH

H. H. Gifford, Son of Retired Attorney, Succumbs.

Harold Harvey Gifford, 49, son of W. H. Gifford, retired Mansfield attorney, died early today in Atlanta, Ga., according to word received here.

Educated in Mansfield schools and at University of Michigan, he had lived in Tampa, Fla., for the past 20 years, where he was engaged in the automobile service and parts business. Prior to that he was employed by the Goodyear Tire and Rubber company.

Surviving in addition to his father, are his wife, the former Blanche Copeland; a brother, Paul, Mansfield; his mother, Mrs. Clara Gifford, residing in Detroit, and two sisters, also in Detroit.

Funeral arrangements have not been completed.

DIES FRIDAY

Mrs. Mary R. Likes Lived In Ashland All Of Life.

ASHLAND — A life-long resident of Ashland, Mrs. Mary R. Likes, 83, died Friday at the McFadden Rest home following a lingering illness.

There are no immediate survivors.

Funeral services will be conducted at 2 p. m. Tuesday at the Denbow-Baer funeral home. Rev. F. W. Brown, pastor of the Christian church of which she was a member will officiate. Burial will be in Ashland cemetery.

ENVOY WOULD RESIGN, REPORT

New York Times Says Standley to Moscow Sends Strong Message to FDR.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK — The New York Times, in a Washington dispatch quoting "well informed circles," says that Admiral William H. Standley has notified President Roosevelt of his desire to resign immediately as ambassador to Moscow.

According to the report, it was added, the admiral expressed his desire in a telegram on or about the day Joseph E. Davies arrived in Moscow May 19 with the president's letter to Premier Stalin. The Times story continued:

"The resignation has not yet been accepted and it may be that Admiral Standley will receive some other post in the government, either abroad or here. But there seems to be no question that he has become dissatisfied with conditions surrounding his present mission and feels it of little use for him to continue in his present office. According to some reports, his message of resignation was vigorous."

The dispatch says U. S. military and navay aides in Russia had reported directly to their departments in Washington instead of through the ambassador, and some of them at times had not given him their information.

ONE INJURED IN TWO ACCIDENTS

One person suffered minor injuries in two automobile accidents in the Mansfield area yesterday, state patrolmen reported today.

Mrs. Lloyd D. Bower, Mt. Gilead R. D. 1, suffered a bruised leg when her husband failed to observe a stop sign and drove his car onto U. S. Route 42, Mt. Gilead R. D. 3, officers said.

A car driven by Willard O. Horn, 127 Sycamore street, was damaged when it struck a truck parked on U. S. Route 30. State patrolmen said the truck driver, Joseph Boback, Glenshaw, Pa., was parked at the side of the highway.

FUNERAL MONDAY

Up and Down THE STREET

You'll no longer hear the complaint from that soldier overseas that he spent days running down his commanding officer to get him to sign a request for a package from home. The United States postal department has made a slight change in the procedure for requesting packages weighing not over five pounds to be sent overseas. The package must be requested by the soldier but the signature of the commanding officer is no longer needed. A postal bulletin issued to postoffices over the country says that the soldier's request and the envelope in which it arrived are to be presented by the sender to the postoffice before the package may be mailed.

UMW MAPPING FUTRUE ACTION

Coal Truce Expires Monday, Observers Expect It Will Be Extended.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON — With the extended truce in the coal dispute expiring Monday night, the policy committee of John L. Lewis' United Mine Workers union was called together today to map future actions.

After three days of negotiations, the miners and coal operators have not yet hit upon a solution to the months-long wage dispute.

The main issue blocking settlement still is the question of "portal-to-portal pay" or compensation for travel time spent in the mines before the laborers reach their place of work.

Negotiations are continuing, however, and hopes are high that the coal strike truce will again be extended.

At yesterday's meeting Lewis and the operators "skirted around the many issues at stake," a union spokesman said. No new offer was made by the operators, it was reported, and no issue was resolved.

It will not be possible, observers said, to present the policy committee at today's meeting with a full contract—as was originally hoped in some quarters.

However, the 200-man committee will be filled in on the negotiations. The committee will also study the war labor board's decision in the coal strike.

Theater To Show News Reel On Tunisian Victory.

With the Tunisian victory still one of the main topics of discussion, Masfielders will be interested in the first pictures of the fall of Bizerte to the Allied troops, which will be shown at the Park theater, beginning Sunday.

The taking of Hill 609, most important single link in the defense of Bizerte and the march into Mateur, General Eisenhower with the troops and the cheering crowds in Ferryville — all are shown in the newsreel.

The pictures show the surrender of hordes of German soldiers and the capture of 13 generals, including Von Arnim, alive.

WOULD LIMIT ARMY SIZE TO 8,500,000 MEN

Rep. May Proposes Measure As Means of Preventing Call of Fathers.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON — Rep. Andrew J. May (D.), Ky., chairman of the house military affairs committee, today proposed a bill limiting the armed forces to 8,500,000 men as a means of preventing induction of married men, especially fathers. The present limit is 11,000,000.

May revealed his plans after the senate military affairs committee killed the Kilday bill which would have deferred all married men until statewide pools of single men had been exhausted.

"Selective service and army officials went before the senate committee and told stories altogether different from those they told the house committee," May said.

"They told us they were for the bill but when they got to the other end of the capitol building they changed their attitude entirely. They have wholly disregarded the intent of congress. If they are going to assume this arbitrary, dictatorial position I'll give them something to fight about with a bill to hold the armed forces down to 8,500,000 men."

May demanded to know "what would be done with 11,000,000 men anyway when there aren't enough ships to take them overseas" and 6,750,000 must be kept in training camps in this country.

Sen. Robert R. Reynolds (D.), N. C., chairman of the senate military affairs committee, and Sen. A. E. Chandler (D.), Ky., a committee member, said that efforts to stay deferment of married men are "about dead."

Rep. Paul J. Kilday (D.), Tex., author of the deferment bill, was as bitter as Rep. May.

Gen. Hershey and Gen. White and other representatives of the selective service system and the war department were wholly insincere and employed subterfuge when they opposed this bill," Kilday said.

"It would not be difficult and impossible to carry out. This is proved by the contention of these same officials and of Mr. McNutt that the same provisions are now being carried out."

In testimony before the senate committee Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, director of selective service, said that he would risk being short of draft quotas for a month or so to defer drafting of fathers until August.

ILLNESS FATAL

Mrs. Estelle Schoenman Taken By Death at Hospital.

Mrs. Estelle Schoenman, 49, of 715 Highland avenue, died at the Mansfield General hospital Friday afternoon following a long illness.

She was born at Wauseon, O., June 5, 1893, but had lived in Mansfield for the past 25 years.

Surviving are two sons, Charles W., with the U. S. army at Shepherd Field, Texas, and Robert of Mansfield; four brothers, William N. Molt, U. S. navy, L. R. Molt and F. W. Molt of Pittsburgh, and W. B. Molt of Canton; two sisters, Misses Bessie and Gertrude Molt of Pittsburgh.

The body was removed to the Geiger funeral home, pending funeral arrangements.

AN APPLE FOR EVE --

By Kathleen Norris

(Copyright, 1943)

CHAPTER XXI

It was a full hour after his arrival that Chris could have a word alone with her. In that time she had bathed the children, fed the smallest one, carried him upstairs, returned to see that the twins had their supper, made a dozen trips to and fro between the kitchen and terrace in the process of superintending certain details of the dinner and setting the table under the great oak that shadowed the southwest corner of the house.

Meanwhile Larry had come home, somewhat tired and silent, and Hugh, still "Marc," as Chris greeted him, had come up for a few minutes' visit before going on to camp.

Hugh was gone and Larry had gone upstairs to freshen himself for dinner. Then Loveday came out with a great bowl of fruit and stood with it in her hands, looking critically at the table.

"I wish you would stand like that for a couple of centuries," Chris said. "The goddess of plenty — of fruition — the eternal mother of the world."

"How nice, Chris!" she said absently, putting the fruit down in the center of the plates and glasses. "Water — butter — and then we're through," she murmured. "I think I'll wait for those until Larry comes down."

And she dropped into a chair, a little breathless, and turned her smiling eyes on her companion.

"Well, so you're really here! After China and coming home by Clipper and going to Rio, and writing The Odd Chance! How you've been living, Chris!"

"You've been doing the living, my dear. I've been wasting my time. "You've lived every minute of it."

"They told you all about Hugh, of course; Marc — you know. Wasn't that an extraordinary thing?" Loveday went away to the house again. When she returned Larry had come down, and the conversation and the meal began together.

"Rio, Chris, is it fascinating? Did you get material for a new play there?" Loveday asked.

"I didn't go for that. I went for the thrill of the Clipper trip and the places we'd stop at on the way," Chris said; "but all Rio is a succession of theatrical sets, only too dramatic to be real. Yes, I got a sort of play started, to be called Gloria Hill."

"A girl who has been practicing Chopin and an American naval officer," she said, smiling.

"Exactly. The immortal plot." Loveday served the peaches from the big Canton bowl into smaller Canton bowls.

"Your own peaches?" the guest asked.

"Our own peaches. Our own corn. And practically our own milk, for Bettancourt pays his rent that way. We had a plan," she continued, "of buying a calf or two and starting a little dairy of our own. But Bettancourt has been here forty years—was born here, in fact—and he and his son have everything organized."

"It's the way to live it seems to me," Chris said. "Near to the things you need. Eggs not coming in crates and milk in bottles. I was at one of the big hotels in New York last year," he went on with a glance at Larry that was so discouraged by the latter's uninterested aspect that he turned to Loveday again, "and I ordered hot cakes and syrup for breakfast. After a long wait they brought them to me under a silver cover, showed them to me as if they had been breast of pheasant, and served me two, reserving the other two for some future moment."

Loveday laughed gaily. Larry might have laughed, too, she reflected, if only briefly. But Larry was not listening, apparently.

"That," she said, "would drive me mad. If there's one thing that ought to be served in a hot, buttered, damp stack it's pancakes! . . . Another peach, Larry?"

"No, thanks." The meal was over. Loveday gathered the dishes on a tray; Annie Lum stumped out. The women's voices could be heard in the kitchen; there was silence on the terrace. Loveday came to the dining-room door and called out: "Chris, are you staying overnight?"

"Can't possibly!" Chris called back. "I'm dated in Burlingame at about ten; I've got to get going very shortly!"

"Oh," Loveday said regretfully, disappearing again.

When she came out Chris was pulling on his pipe, comfortably stretched in a long chair, and Larry was sitting on the railing, his back half turned to his guest.

"What's happening in Burlingame?" Loveday lay back in a second shabby steamer chair with a long tired sigh. "It's hot," she said.

"Nothing. Except that Joe Stubbs will be there. He wrote me he had to go to a dinner, but he'd come round to the club as soon as he could."

"And with Larry acting this way the sooner you get going the better," Loveday said in her soul. "Was it hot in Redwood City, Larry?" she asked.

"No, cool and comfortable," Larry answered sarcastically. But his tone was so quiet that Chris saw nothing amiss and commented cheerfully:

"Then Redwood City for me on a day like this. It was frying, coming up the valley."

"I should think you'd take the coast road," Larry said briefly, "shorter and better."

"Ah, but I wanted to see your wife, and all of you." Chris added the last phrase after a perceptible halt. Loveday noticed it; she could only hope Larry did not.

"You can come by the coast road and cut over the ridge—What on earth are we talking about?" Loveday said, the question being framed only in her thoughts.

"I think I'll turn in," Larry muttered abruptly, rising.

"And I've got five minutes," Chris said with a nod for good night. "I must be on my way."

"Being out in the open all day, I get so slee-ee-py!" Loveday contributed with an apologetic laugh. But when Larry had gone and a pale square of light from his upstairs bedroom fell upon the dark mass of a pine she and Chris sat on in comfortable silence without moving.

Quite suddenly there was no constraint. Chris opened the talk in his own easy yet hesitant fashion, not hurrying his words, pausing now and then to choose one carefully. And immediately she was transported to that world that was his world. She saw the decks of a great ocean liner tipping gently in glorious spring weather and the laughing and talking men and women who walked on the decks. She saw smoky London in the days of peace only a few years ago; the smart bright restaurants where the sweets were wheeled about on little trucks, the yellow fog that curled softly about the lions in Trafalgar Square. Chris talked of first nights in Broadway theaters and the great folk who attended them and the Long Island estates where these same great folk idled away their Sundays discussing the plays and the players.

It was so easy to talk to Chris!

"What a life you've had—are having, I mean!"

"Nothing," he said, "as vital as this. Children, home, drying apricots."

"Exactly what five million other women are doing in America at this moment—with the possible exception of the apricots!"

"Well, perhaps." He did not dispute it. He said that he must go, and Loveday walked with him to his car and asked him when she would see him again.

"But of course you don't know; you never know where you are going to be, do you? I don't wonder people think they would like to be writers, because wherever you can carry your typewriter you can have your whole business." She looked up at him, in the shadows of the dark tall trees with a glint of star-shine catching her eyes. "It's been great fun having you here, Chris," she said, her heart beating fast.

"I saw what I came to see," he answered her, getting into his car. There was no other farewell except his casual call of "Good-Night!" as the car started.

Housewives Hear Monthly HFV Talk on Drying Foods for Victory

OPS Is Center For Information On Dehydration.

"You will solve some of next winter's food problems if you preserve fruits and vegetables now," Mrs. Irene Oberlin, home economist for Ohio Public Service said Thursday in addressing the Health for Victory meeting in the OPS room, corner of Third and Diamond streets.

Two methods of preserving foods, dehydration and brining, were explained and demonstrated by Mrs. Oberlin, and June Health for Victory meal planning guides containing step by step instructions were distributed to the homemakers.

"Dehydration or drying is one of the best ways to preserve non-acid vegetables," Mrs. Oberlin explained. "The secret of success in drying foods lies in the removal of enough moisture to prevent spoilage. Harmful bacteria, which cause spoilage, cannot thrive without moisture," she said.

The Health for Victory members were told that the vegetables best suited for dehydration are corn, beans, peas, carrots and okra. The best fruits are apples, pears, peaches and apricots. Strawberries do not dry well but dewberries, blackberries, gooseberries and raspberries are excellent for drying.

"Not only is it impotant to select the right foods for drying, but it is also essential to use the proper methods of dehydration," Mrs. Oberlin pointed out. The six steps are: (1) Use tree ripened fruit free from blemishes, and table fresh vegetables that are tender, crisp and thoroughly clean. (2) Dry immediately, that is, be prepared to start the dehydration process as soon as the fruits and vegetables have been gathered. (3) Blanch vegetables and dip or sulphur fruits before dehydrating them. (4) Make sure there is an even flow of air circulating through the evaporator or oven and around and over the fruit or vegetables being dehydrated. (5) Provide sufficient heat to dry the fruit or vegetables as quickly as possible, without scorching the food. (6) Store the dehydrated foods properly in a cool, dry, dark place.

Steam blanching is an important procedure to save soluble food elements, set the color of vegetables, remove objectionable odors, hasten drying, and check the ripening processes. The speaker said that as a source of heat for indoor dehydrators an oven, light bulbs, range surface burners and portable heaters may be used.

Models of two dehydrators which can be built at home with a minimum expenditure are on display in the Ohio Public Service showroom, 10 South Park, along with detailed information on how to build one.

Turning to brining as a method of preserving foods, Mrs. Oberlin said it does two things: withdraws moisture from the food and makes it impossible for harmful bacteria to thrive; creates a chemical action that enables desirable bacteria to grow. The combined action is known scientifically as "selective bacterial action."

"There are two ways of brining vegetables . . . dry salt and wet salt. The dry salt method uses either a light or a heavy brine solution also depending upon the vegetable," the home economist said.

Mrs. Oberlin emphasized that the Health for Victory members would find complete information on dehydrating and brining in the June meal planning guides prepared by the Westinghouse Home Economics Institute and distributed Thursday at the meeting.

Detailed information about the proper choice of foods to be dried or brined, photographs illustrating the procedures and complete descriptions of the equipment required are included in the June Health for Victory meal planning guides, in addition to suggested menus and recipes for every day in the month. These bulletins may also be obtained upon request at the Ohio Public Service showroom.

NATIVE WINES CHEERED BY CONNOISSEURS

Weaver's Home Supply Has Wide Selection In Domestic Stock.

While the war has brought many unpleasant restrictions to our tables, it has also developed among the American people both the willingness to become self sufficient and the capacity to enjoy what we have.

We grow in Victory Gardens now the food that came to us so effortlessly in times past. In the same way we are beginning to develop our own American vintages. And we are beginning to like it.

Our generation will perhaps never again see the quality or quantity in the wines that were imported from Europe for vineyards devasted and neglected must be counted in the toll of destruction. Meanwhile our own American vineyards, unaffected by war, have stepped up production and our wineries have improved their product.

So that now American wines have come into their own, presenting a wide range of uses at table and meeting the requirements of many and diverse tastes.

Weaver's Home Supply, 50 South Diamond street, carries a representative selection of these native wines, including Dudenhoefer's American May wine, a light grape wine sweetened with Woodruff herbs and a great favorite among connoisseurs of sparkling beverages.

The average person, faced with the bewildering assortment of labels and names on the shelves at Weaver's may become confused. For that reason Mr. Weaver is happy to suggest the proper wine and discuss with the customer the correct method of serving each.

Mr. Weaver divides the list of wines in relation to the food with which they are to be used: aperitif wines which are offered before the meal starts, white wines and red wines according to the dishes which comprise the meal, sparkling wines which have an almost universal service, and sweet dessert wines and brandies which follow.

However, Weaver points out, no hard and fast rule applies to the selection of a wine. Whether it be white or red, still or sparkling, dry or sweet, he suggests that you drink the wine which you most enjoy.

"Wine is a true accompaniment to good food," he states. "It requires no more ceremony in serving than the dishes of a meal, and in day to day use," he goes on, "should cause no extraordinary comment. Americans will approach true temperance when they accept the serving of wines as a matter of course."

Mansfield News-Journal

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

MANSFIELD, OHIO, SATURDAY, MAY 29, 1943.

Drive carefully tomorrow and Monday—you are needed to help win the war.

June is ordinarily a delightful month in this part of the country—and will gain in appeal by the fact that it will bring a full pound of coffee.

Just as John L. Lewis wants to bring his half million coal miners back into the AFL, a half million machinists move to get out—which is nice timing in avoiding a vacancy.

'Something Else' Being Tried Again

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S formula—announced soon after the advent of his first New Deal administration—"If that doesn't work we'll try something else," has again been applied in an effort to bring some sort of order out of the chaos that has developed as a result of overlapping authority and departmental friction in Washington.

Appointment of James F. Byrnes as head of the newly created Office of War Mobilization comes so quickly after the Roosevelt-Churchill conferences that it may be associated in the public mind with some of the sound common sense ideas of the British prime minister.

It is also noted that this change in administration policy came very shortly after President Roosevelt's stern rebuke of Akron rubber works strikers, and fair interpretation, at least for the moment, could be that the president is at last giving some attention to sound advice and setting out on a course not entirely motivated by individual views, personal ambitions or partisan considerations.

Early comment is in agreement that Mr. Byrnes is an admirable choice for the big job that has been assigned to him, but there is a natural question as to the ability of any one man to overcome the obstacles that stand in the way of eradicating the confusion that has been permitted to develop as a result of delay in clarifying the authority of various department heads.

Lack of co-ordination in the offices of war production, civilian supply, defense transportation and man-power distribution has been responsible for much of the blundering that has marked administrative procedure to date, and there will be widespread hope—if not complete confidence—that this new trial of "something else" will bring worthwhile results instead of doing no more than adding another alphabetical agency to the already overburdened machinery of government.

Creditable Record of Service

ANOTHER of the family names long familiar in Mansfield will not carry into the next generation—that of "Homberger," which has been well and favorably known here since 1869.

Early association of the name was with the firm of Homberger & Hautzenroeder, which was among the first to gain national recognition for fine cigars.

In more recent years, following the death of his father in 1901, it has been Herman Homberger who has creditably carried the family name, and his death removes one of this community's fine citizens—a man who devoted much of his life to public service and who gave competent and conscientious attention to the duties of each of the several positions he was called upon to fill.

Whether as service director, county treasurer, or as postmaster, Herman Homberger proved himself capable, industrious and thoroughly dependable. Characteristic of his attention to his work is the fact that, although not feeling well during his final day at the postoffice, he remained at his desk until evening, as was his habit.

Always interested and active in affairs of the political party with which he was affiliated, the word, "politics," gains more creditable meaning as it is considered in relation to the career of Herman Homberger. As a citizen, a friend and an associate he will be missed by many.

Two-Thirds of World 'In Want'

AT LEAST a faint idea of the enormity of the post-war task of freeing the entire world from want is gained by revelation that two-thirds of the world's population is "in want," even in normal times.

This information is contained in a booklet just issued by the Public Affairs Committee, 30 Rockefeller Plaza, New York, and was disclosed by a survey made by Elizabeth Hoyt, professor of economics of Iowa State college.

Declaring that modern science has made it possible to measure want in exact terms, Miss Hoyt uses the yardsticks of malnutrition, death rate and illiteracy to prepare a "World Map of Want," which shows the whole of Africa, much of Asia and South America below the level of healthy living.

"Want is no longer necessary," Miss Hoyt insists. "The means for its control are in man's hands. Today we know the fundamentals of nutrition and how to get nourishing food in abundance. . . . We have dozens of effective weapons now ready to be used to free people from disease and premature death."

Among the weapons now at hand for winning freedom from hunger, disease, and ignorance, the author lists relatively simple changes in diet, the application of already available measures of care and cleanliness in the control of disease, and the whittling down of illiteracy.

Miss Hoyt sees the United Nations as an agency which can be strengthened, further developed, and immediately used in the struggle for freedom from want after the war.

Finland To Resume Paying

THE FINNS want to resume paying on their war debt to the United States. Finland was long the one European country to recognize and observe this financial obligation. In 1940 it won a three-year moratorium from congress, which expires on June 15.

Nothing is less likely than its renewal. Whether she can help it or not Finland is today Hitler's supporter and a menace to the safety of Leningrad. The good will she won by her regularity in payment, and by her fight against Russia when that country was at peace with Germany, is now dissipated. The Finns may well be expected to pay the $168,000 due on June 15 without asking for further favors.

No wonder foreigners find it difficult to learn English. The dictionary says "hit" and "strike" mean the same thing, yet note the vast difference between "hitting" the enemy and "striking" in a war industry.

Some 'Safe Berths' Not So Safe

By CARTER FIELD

WASHINGTON—A little knowledge is a dangerous thing, it is said. This goes not only for arm chair strategists but for doting parents trying to find safe berths for their draft age sons.

Some of them have really succeeded in their meneuvers to provide protection for their loved ones. But some of them have done exactly the opposite. There are plenty of illustrations, though obviously it is impossible to use names. There are seldom letters on file showing the real objectives, hence it is difficult to prove any given case.

Sometimes the efforts to protect prove so annoying and disgusting to the officers on whom pressure is brought that they actually go out of their way to thwart what they regard as an unfair method to protect one's own and let someone else's son take the dangerous spot.

ON THE other hand, sometimes the would-be protector gets a little bad information as to what really are safe, or safer jobs. Washington society still chuckles occasionally over an episode of this sort in the last war. A very influential parent, worried over a draft age son, studied the situation.

Finally decision was reached that the pay corps of the navy was the best possible spot for the young man. Prodigious pulling of wires followed and the son was duly commissioned in the pay corps. He was sent to sea on a battleship.

So far, so good. Nothing happened to the battleship. Nothing happened to ANY United States battleship in the last war. No one would have thought much more about this episode, despite the social prominence of the family, if the young man had not figured in a divorce action several years later. The opposing attorney made some slurs about bomb-proof jobs, which might have been expected. But the young man's counsel was indignant.

So when his turn came, he asked his client, the ex-pay officer:

"Were you not on a battleship during the war?"

"Yes sir," replied the young man.

"Don't you know that the station of paymaster on a battleship is one of the most dangerous places one can be during a sea battle?"

"No, I didn't," said the young man, with such obvious surprise that everyone in the courtroom roared, except the young man, his parent, who happened to be present, and his counsel, who paid the price of surprising his own witness.

THE REALLY interesting fact is that the paymaster on a ship is in just about the same danger as the most exposed fighting man on board. But there is seldom such a dramatic expose of intentions.

There is a young ensign just sailing on an aircraft carrier due to his father's maneuvering. That father has been pulling wires since Pearl Harbor. First he got the boy on a battleship. Then he became convinced from reading about submarine warfare that the faster the ship the safer its crew.

The writer of the article was talking about merchant ships, which might run away from the subs, but the father did not differentiate. He didn't rest until he got the boy assigned to an aircraft carrier which he heard was the speediest big ship in the navy. Everybody is pleased—the boy because in his case he is not trying to dodge danger—is eager for action, the father, because he thinks the boy is in a comparatively safe spot, the officers pestered into making the transfer for obvious reasons.

Listen World!

Get Back on Beam!

I LIKE our slang. We Americans have a knack of packing more History, Psychology and Hard Boiled Truth into half a dozen words than you'd find in whole pages of the encyclopedia.

Take that phrase—"You're off the Beam," f'instance. First time you heard it, it didn't seem to make sense. Something to do with aviation probably. Pilots use Beam to make landings . . . great highways of light guiding them through the stars . . . bringing them home out of the night and the storm. But what has that to do with you and me and our ordinary lives?

How does that apply to those spells of blues you're having lately? Sometimes you hardly know yourself, you're so irritable and depressed. Everyone notices it. Even you admit it. But what's the answer?

THE ANSWER IS—YOU'RE OFF THE BEAM, PARTNER. AND THAT'S ABOUT THE WORST THING THAT COULD HAPPEN TO YOU. IT'S AS DEADLY AS DEATH. ACTUALLY IT IS A SLOW FORM OF DEATH.

For a "BEAM" isn't a mechanical gadget or a blueprint for Success. A Beam is a way of life. Your particular way of life. You begin shaping yours in your first crib and you'll never stop till you reach the grave.

Beams are intangible things, but they're just as real and they affect you just as profoundly as shafts of blazing steel. Beams are made of all your viewpoints, experiences, attitudes . . . of ideas and ideals you learned as a tiny tyke . . . of secret fears and conceits and grudges you've gradually accumulated.

"And, generally speaking, they're mighty useful affairs, and you're proud of them. You want to go on being honest and brave, kind and generous, decent and eager, filled with a healthy hunger for beauty and adventure.

And you honestly believe that you have retained all these qualities you've admired since your childhood. Moreover, you'd be furious if someone said you'd changed . . . told you you'd become an old fogey. Yet you have.

IT DIDN'T HAPPEN IN A DAY OR A YEAR. IT DIDN'T EVEN HAPPEN CONSCIOUSLY. IT "SNUK UP ON YOU."

Slowly but surely you've been changing . . . taking things easier, permitting yourself to be swamped by irritating habits and attitudes which you thought "didn't matter." You've been coddling yourself, too . . . easing up on your self-control . . . giving way to laziness, cowardice, conceit and self-indulgence.

Chances are, you aren't current. You're "sick of all this war talk" . . . "can't be bothered to keep up with the news" . . . letting yourself become cynical and bored. That's wrong?

The truth is—you're off the beam and don't realize it! You have lost your way in the darkness . . . And where do you go from here? If you've a smitch of hoss sense, partner, you'll turn around and head for home.

It won't be easy or safe. Change and chance are never easy. It'll call for all the courage and patience you have—and all the humility. But it's the only way to make living worth while again . . . to be part of the regular crowd. So, quit your stalling! Get a-going! And here's to luck —AND HAPPY LANDING!

Timely Editorial

Churchill's Example.

It remained for the prime minister of Great Britain to report to the congress of the United States on the progress of the war. Why didn't the president do it?

President Roosevelt has made a mistake in not making more frequent reports to congress and to the nation on the situation both abroad and at home. He could build up a greater spirit of cooperation between the legislative bodies and the White House and between the people and the government if he were to make them partners, in so far as security permits, in the fighting of the war. He can keep them posted on what has been done and what must be done to win.

The prime minister has given the president an excellent example. We hope he follows it.—Akron Beacon Journal.

Summary of Week's Happenings

Firmer Policies of Enforcement Follow Experiments In Mildness

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

THE TOUGH POLICY Leon Henderson laid down as head of the Office of Price Administration led him over the hill to retirement.

Michigan's ex-Senator Prentiss Brown succeeded him with the conviction that a little more diplomacy would quiet the clanking in the rationing machinery.

During the week Brown was beginning to wonder. Amid sharp-shooting by members of congress, reports of bitter dissension and wholesale resignations within OPA, Brown prepared to go into action. He did not say OPA would return to the Henderson plan, but he did promise a firmer policy.

The OPA would tackle the black market problem forcibly, Brown indicated, if congress would include in the fiscal year's funds salaries for 1,400 more inspectors and 5,000 more local ration board clerks. It would roll back the prices of meat, butter and coffee 10 per cent—if congress would approve his $400,000,000 subsidy program.

To reports that food experts in the agency were resigning because their recommendations were superseded by those of lawyers and economists, Brown replied there had been disputes over policy differences, denied there had been "mass resignations."

To the report that food rationing functions might be transferred to the office of War Food Administrator Chester C. Davis, Brown said, "There's nothing to it. Davis and I get along splendidly."

Not getting along splendidly were thousands of motorists and others in 13 northeastern states and the District of Columbia. On top of the ban against pleasure driving, the Office of Defense Transportation at midweek knocked out entirely the retail delivery of luxury items.

The order meant that retailers could not deliver to their customers any alcoholic beverages, soft drinks, candy or tobacco; ice cream, magazines, toys, furs, radios and phonographs. Deliveries of other items were reduced sharply, operation of trucks, buses and taxicabs was reduced 40 per cent. The ODT promised only that the situation would be even more serious in the next 60 days.

At Home

End of Tax Tempest.

For more than four months, the needle on the income tax legislation meter swung madly from one extreme ("There shall be no abatement of taxes due!") to the other ("Let's wipe out a year's taxes for everybody!"). During the week it came to a stop somewhere around dead center.

Out of a senate-house conference came what appeared to be the wartime tax law: A bill to abate 1942 obligations (or 1943, if that liability is smaller) for persons owing $50 or less—with 75 per cent abatement for those owing more than that, the remainder to be paid in two yearly installments—and the imposition of a 20 per cent withholding levy on taxable portions of wages and salaries, beginning July 1.

Not $2, But $1.

Twice John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, averted a showdown in his controversy with the U. S. government—each time by extending the existing working agreement for his half-million miners.

During the week the War Labor Board, which he previously had rebuffed, offered Lewis a compromise that gave hope for settling the protracted dispute.

Denying a flat $2 daily increase in pay, the board's decision granted increases of approximately $1 a day, directed the mine operators to negotiate with the union on compensation for underground travel—portal-to-portal pay.

The WLB pointed out that the miners had received wage increases in excess of the 15 per cent allowed by the Little Steel formula since January 1, 1941.

River, Stay 'Way—

A strange youth had to use his hands to explain how much milk he wanted to buy, and aroused the suspicions of a farmer near Talihina, Okla. Arrested, the milk-seeker proved to be a German war prisoner who had escaped from a stockade at Camp Chaffee, Ark., through a hole washed by rising waters of the Arkansas river.

More tragic were most of the incidents which accompanied flood crests on the Mississippi and its swollen tributaries. Millions of acres of farm land in Illinois, Missouri, Indiana and Arkansas were inundated. Damage exceeding $40,000,000—chiefly in crops and livestock—was added to the toll of 160,000 made homeless, a score known dead.

Famous Names Dept.

The Navy checked up on the John Paul Joneses, to see how the namesakes of the U. S. Navy's founder were doing.

The result: 35 J. P. J.'s in service, ranging from lieutenant to apprentice seaman. Casualties so far: Two, one in an airplane accident, one drowned while in training.

No Surrender.

Rocky caves and natural bridges on foggy Attu made a macabre battleground for the last stand of pocketed Japanese troops. U. S. forces, relentlessly mopping up amid the crags and boulders, foresaw no immediate end to their campaign, for the sons of Heaven appeared ready to fight to the death.

Probably from the Kuriles chain, some 630 miles from Attu, came flights of Japanese bombers to harass the Americans.

Meanwhile, tough U. S. Navy "See-bees"—construction troops—had been landed on Attu and were rushing toward completion the airfield which the Japs started for themselves. It reminded Secretary Knox of Guadalcanal.

Abroad

Fears for China.

While the Yanks edged closer to Tokyo via the Aleutian stepping stones, new fears were voiced for hard-pressed China. Intense Japanese operations around Ichang on the Yangtz river presented a two-pronged menace.

A Jap campaign to consolidate territory along the Yangtze would imperil farming provinces vital to the supply of China's forces.

Even more dangerous would be a sustained drive upon Chungking, the capital. While the Chinese expressed confidence in their ability to resist such a drive, it might easily deprive them of Hunan and Szechwan provinces, rich in resources.

Comintern Quits.

In one of the most significant turns of World war II, the Third International — the Moscow comintern—dissolved itself. The stated reason was the inability to convene a congress in wartime; the actual reason appeared to be a step toward greater unity of Russia and those Allies which had feared the influence of Communism in the post-war world.

The comintern pulled no punches, said frankly that while developments of the last quarter-century had justified the organizational work of the International, by the complication of problems in the separate countries it had ". . . even become a drag on further strengthening of the national working class parties."

Bombs By the Ton.

During the week, the RAF administered the heaviest aerial raid in history to the industrial and transportation city of Dortmund in Germany's Ruhr valley, already ravaged by floods from the RAF mining of two dams a week earlier. Adding emphasis, Duesseldorf got a comparable blow 48 hours later.

Air ministry figures revealed that 2,000 devastating tons of bombs dropped on fiery Dortmund brought to more than 100,000 tons the total delivered by British fliers to German cities since Goering boasted, in 1939, that not a single enemy bomb would reach the Ruhr.

Broadly hinting invasion, Lieut. Gen. Jacob L. Devers broadcast from London that American forces in the European theater are "well prepare dto carry out decisions of the high command, now being formulated in Washington."

Farmer's Diary

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

INCREASE OF LIVESTOCK

"THAT pup is police-shepherd," said the farmer's wife, pointing to a two-month-old dog that romped around their yard. "I'm disgusted with him. He spoiled all my sweet potato plants this morning. Besides we don't need him. We have dogs enough, goodness knows! Would you like to have him, I wonder—for your little boys?"

Would we! I opened the rear door and she lifted the puppy in. He was a fuzzy, bearlike, young thing with big feet and a kind of ungainly charm that our teen-age daughter immediately labeled "his rare personality." ("Why, he's like Orphan Annie's Sandy—only younger, of course.")

Now, with a low whine, he sat up on the rear cushion and looked sadly at his mother and the spotted hound whom he had played with from birth. It was as if he said goodbye to home and friends.

No more harm to sweet potato vines . . . no more shoes and rubbers stolen . . . no more worry to pigs and chickens around here . . . I'm leaving for good. There'll be peace and quiet when I'm gone, no doubt, but I only hope they'll miss me all my dog-gone days . . . brrr, what a life a dog leads . . . and am I car sick!

He slumped down on the floor and shut his dizzy eyes.

Four little brothers and a bowl of bread and milk revived him, when we got home. He is one of the family now. They named him SERGEANT. He has his own place in the barn, along with Betsy and Mrs. Bones; Oink, the pig, Big Bertha the old brown sow, and two big barn cats.

The other morning our youthful dairyman came bounding through the door—"Betsy has a calf! It's up and lively. It jumps stiff legged! Gee, but she's proud of it—come out and see!"

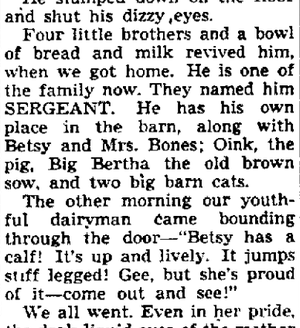
We all went. Even in her pride, the dark liquid eyes of the mother cow were weary. She moved slowly toward the prepared feed and the water we hastened to give her. Milky sprays threaded down upon the straw from her distended udders. The calf bleated and she answered with a low moo.

When she had eaten with relish, Sarge, the young dog, thrust his inquisitive brown muzzle above the manger. Betsy became belligerent. She lunged savagely in the direction of the pup. But he wasn't there! With a howl of fear he had disappeared down the strawy entry, ears flat against his head, tail between his legs.

"Will we sell the calf, or keep it?" asked the oldest boy.

"It's beef type," I reminded him. "We'll keep it. Next February, say, it may look pretty good as beef steak."

LIFE'S LIKE THAT



"Of course you didn't wake me up, Mrs. Robinson."

Quotes

Dr. Frank G. Boudreau, nutrition expert: "You can give animals a perfectly logical diet and not get any back talk about it, but man, unfortunately, has definite ideas about what he's going to eat."

Sen. Arthur Capper of Kansas: "If the public accepts complacently the program of complete secrecy and the lack of press coverage of the food conference, then the same rule can be applied to the more important International conferences to come later."

In Short

Introduced:—In congress, a bill to increase by 15 per cent the government's monthly contribution (now $28), to the dependents of enlisted men.

Nominated: For promotion to vice admiral, William A. Glassford, jr., of Phoenix, Ariz., who as a rear admiral successfully negotiated the use of French facilities at Dakar by U. S. naval forces.

Married: Screen actress Ann Sothern, 31, and ex-actor Robert Sterling (now a soldier) 27, in Ventura, Calif.

Died: In Detroit, Edsel Ford, 49, president of the Ford Motor company and son of its founder, after post-operative complications resulting from stomach trouble; Mrs. William Howard Taft, 81, widow of the ex-president and mother of Sen. Robert Taft, in Washington.

Dave Boone Says:

IN WORLD WAR I you didn't find Washington crippling the public transportation lines at the same time that it kept private cars off the roads. Anybody who don't live in the heart of a city is certainly put in a tough spot by the curtailment of bus lines at the very time that people are finding it necessary to lay up their own cars. But maybe the new "over-all" board just appointed will straighten out the mess.

* * *

To get to and from the suburbs of countless New England and Atlantic seaboard towns is almost impossible. A lot of rural dwellers are practically marooned after sunset. New York's troubles ain't nothing in comparison.

I wouldn't be surprised if the use of bicycles, buggies and roller skates was ordered discontinued any minute to make the picture of hysterical last-minute action more complete.

* * *

The joke is that with any foresight at all the buses and taxicabs could have been made to go easy on gas for the last two years, just as private car owners could have, instead of an abrupt crackdown on most everything that moves.

* * *

Well, what's the use of squawking. We ain't on Attu. And we've got one more board to look out for us.

REPORT ROMMEL HEALTH BROKEN

Cairo Says Desert Fox Now Has To Walk With Cane.

LONDON—(INS)—Field Marshal Erwin Rommel, former chief of the famed Afrika Korps and long known as the "desert fox," is broken in health and spirit and no longer fit to command, according to a Cairo dispatch to the London News Chronicle.

The story said Rommel was unable to walk without a cane as the result of a tropical disease contracted in Africa, which caused his joints and limbs to swell painfully. The information came from captured Axis generals, Cario advised.

TWO CAP FLIERS SAVED FROM SEA

Planes Pick Them Up After They Bail Out.

REHOBOTH BEACH, Del. — (U.P.)— Two civilian air patrol fliers bailed out of their disabled plane two miles off the Delaware coast today and were rescued after spending two hours on rubber rafts in the Atlantic ocean.

Lieut. Thomas Sanschegrin, the pilot, and Lieut. Warren Smith, the observer, dropped their rubber rafts and then parachuted to safety. The rafts were quickly inflated.

Amphibian planes from Cape May, N. J., and coast guard cutters located the men.

medium and heavy bombers and fighter aircraft.

Probably in an effort to keep enemy planes at Kiska from aiding trapped men on Attu island, American fliers have raided the Kiska installations twice. During a raid on Wednesday, numerous hits were observed on the Japanese main camp area and runway. The results of a raid made on the following day were not observed because of poor visibility.

Allies Pound Japs On New Guinea

UNITED NATIONS HEADQUARTERS IN AUSTRALIA — (INS)— Allied heavy bombers, streaking to the attack through adverse weather, blasted the Boram, Dagua and Dewak airdromes in the Wewak area of New Guinea with 19 tons of bombs, an official communique disclosed today.

At the Boram airfield at least 16 fires were observed by the departing bombers. It was believed that the flames were from enemy aircraft caught in the dispersal areas.

All of the Allied planes returned to base safely despite the intense anti-aircraft fire encountered over the enemy fields.

Chungking Alerted As Jap Plane Appears

CHUNGKING — (INS) — Chungking had a two-hour air alert today when 36 Jap Planes were reported sighted crossing the Szechwan border and heading in the direction of the provisional Chinese capital.

An attack did not materialize, however. The enemy craft were reported to have turned away in the direction of Liangshan after passing Wanshien.

THREE HELD IN THEFT SERIES

Trio Face Armed Robbery Charge In Columbus; Two From Richland County.

troimen, in the possession of a car owned by Thad Winbigler of Shelby, stolen from a parking place in Ganges, Wednesday.

Returned here last night to the county jail, they confessed, Robinson said, to auto thefts in Richland, Delaware and Franklin counties within the past week. Other charges admitted were thefts of guns and Jewelry, from relatives here, and gasoline in the three counties.

The series of crimes began last week-end, the youths related, when Bridges and DeWiel left here in the latter's car, after stealing gasoline and a rifle from Bridges' relatives. After abandoning the car near Columbus they picked up the third youth, a hitch-hiker, they said. In Columbus, they confessed they held up a taxi driver, taking his cab and leaving him along a deserted highway.

Running out of gasoline, they abandoned the cab, they said, and hitch-hiked to Delaware where they stole another car, driving to Ganges, where they picked up the Winbigler auto.

Circling the northern part of the county they stole eight gallon of gasoline from the Pugh Filling station, Olivesburg road, Thursday morning, driving on to Defiance where they were arrested.

TRANSIT STRIKE BREAKING UP

Workers Trickle Back to Jobs In Baltimore.

BALTIMORE—(AP)—The Baltimore Transit company reported that many of its striking employes, members of an AFL affiliated union, trickled back to work today, with entire operations rising to 87 per cent of normal as the strike went into its fifth day.

Nine cases of alleged violence were reported to police overnight, bringing the total to 20.

BLACK SHEEP CRY BAA

FAIRVIEW, Okla.—(U.P.)—Stormy weather cut his church attendance so the Rev. C. L. Moser advertised in the lost-and-found column. His sheep had strayed, the notice read, and only 23 came for their "feed in the morning." Shortly thereafter his telephone began to ring. Each time he said "hello" he got the same reply: "Ba-aa-a-a!"

EX-MANSFIELD YOUTH PULPIT GUEST SUNDAY

Rev. Robert Kinsey, Newly Ordained, to Preach At St. Mark's.

Members of the St. Mark's Lutheran church will have the opportunity at 10:30 a. m. tomorrow to hear one of their group, Rev. Robert S. Kinsey of this city, deliver his first sermon since he was ordained last week in Lancaster. He was graduated from Hamma Divinity school, Springfield, May 16.

Rev. Kinsey, brother of Russel Kinsey, 389½ West Fifth street, has preached here many times in the past two years, while attending the theological school. He has also served as supply pastor at Bellville and other neighboring towns recently. He will begin his pastorate at the St. Paul Lutheran church in Nashville, Tenn., Tuesday.

He was graduated from Mansfield high school with the class of 1934 and was awarded the degree of Doctor of Philosophy in archaeology by John Hopkins university, Baltimore, Md., in 1941.

OPA SUES FOR TRIPLE DAMAGES

Seeks $96,000 From Firm on Steel Ceiling Charges.

CLEVELAND —(U.P.)— A suit for $96,102—the largest treble-damage action brought in federal court here by the office of price administration—was on file today against the Atlas Steel and Supply company, accused of violating price ceilings on scrap steel.

Howard R. Hirsch, chief district OPA attorney who prepared and filed the suit, said evidence showed that the firm purchased scrap which should have been priced inexpensively and resold it to steel mills at best grade prices.

Transactions of the company between July 31 and April 17 accounted for charge sof $32,034 above ceilings, he said.

SPOIL TALE

SACRAMENTO, Cal.—(U.P.)—He thought it would help patch up a lover's quarrel, so the young man soaked his shirt sleeve in mercurochrome to simulate blood.

He told her of shooting it out with a desperado. His attempt for sympathy was so realistic, however, that bystanders thought he was wounded and called police.

The officers proved his story false and left him on the streetcar trying to explain to the girl friend.

At this time, Rev. Mackey will talk on the topic, "The Boys." Children's service is scheduled for 2:30 p. m. Young People's meeting will be conducted at 7 p. m. in charge of Mrs. Ruth Klingman, followed by the closing revival service at 7:45 p. m.

CENTRAL METHODIST

A memorial service, honoring Howard Heifner, who was killed in action, and members of the church who have entered the nation's armed forces will be conducted Sunday at 10:30 a. m. Special music, appropriate poems, and an address by a layman who was very close to Heifner in his school days will highlight the program. The service will also be dedicated to veterans of the Civil, Spanish-American, and World War I.

LUTHERANS MEET

Election of officers for the coming year will highlight the picnic supper of the Mansfield District of Lutheran Ministers, Tuesday at 3 p. m. at Camp Mowana, Lutheran youth camp, located on Ashland road. All Lutheran ministers and their families from this district are urged to attend this picnic.

FIRST CONGREGATIONAL

Rev. Peter Young has chosen the subject, "The Seeing Eye," for the Sunday services at 11:45 a. m. Women's association will meet Thursday at 2 p. m. at the parish house. A musical program will be presented by Mrs. Walter Jameson. Mrs. H. F. Seneff will conduct the worship service. The tea hostesses will be Mrs. E. C. Flory, chairman, Mrs. R. N. Campbell, Mrs. Thomas Ford, Mrs. H. H. Schettler and Mrs. H. M. Spandau.

ST. PAUL'S LUTHERAN

"God's Victory Garden," will be the sermon subject of Rev. Herman L. Gilbert at the Sunday morning service at 10:30 a. m. Ladies Aid society will meet on Thursday at 2 p. m. in the church parlors. Mrs. August Deppe will be the hostess and Mrs. Phyllis Maul, program director. Choirs will rehearse Friday at 6:15 and 7 p. m. Catechism classes meet Saturday at 9 and 10 a. m.

ST. JOHN'S EVANGELICAL

"What Is Happening?" is the title of the sermon chosen by Rev. Paul H. Saleste for Sunday services at 10:30 a. m.

The pastor will be assisted by the senior choir, under the direction of John C. Klinger, which will present the anthems of the morning. St. John's Ladies Guild meets Wednesday at 2 p. m. in charge of Mrs. Edward Fisher. Junior Young People's league will meet Wednesday at 7:30 p. m. with Joseph Dech and Miss Anna Knapp presiding. While no special service is announced for the day, the church has announced that Thursday is the "Day of Our Lord," which precedes Pentecost Sunday by 10 days. Senior choir will rehearse Saturday at 7:30 p. m.

FIRST LUTHERAN

Rev. Grover E. Swoyer will speak on the subject, "Let's Pray for a Better world," at the service at 9:45 a. m. Mrs. Ruth Secrist will present the solo, "God Shall Wipe Away All Tears." The offertory anthem will be "There Is No Death," by O'Hara.

Baccalaureate services for the Mansfield Senior high school graduating class will be conducted at 8 p. m. with Rev. B. F. Hagelbarger, pastor of First Christian church, bringing the message.

Earnest Workers meet Monday at 2 p. m. in the parish house. Fifth district is scheduled to meet Wednesday at the parish house for a covered dish dinner.

In the Civil War the government allowed a friend to pay into the United States treasury the sum of one thousand dollars to excuse a man drafted into the army. A civilian thus freed had a substitute and was anxious about him if he learned who took his place. It happened that a substitute was killed in action and the civilian thus freed was deeply moved. Every Decoration Day this civilian would go to the grave of his soldier substitute and sometimes would lay prostrate on the grave and utter the words, "This Man died for me."

It was something like that which is connected with the life and death of Jesus whose salvation for all men is proclaimed from the pulpit. Why not accept the invitation and COME TO CHURCH NEXT SUNDAY?

D. Carl Yoder.

There are 16,000,000 Jews in the world. Of this number 2,000,000 have been killed in the present world war.

Negro church leaders recently conferred with War Manpower Commissioner Paul V. McNutt on the need for opening hearings on employment discriminatoin in the railroad industry.

The Washington, D. C., Federation of Churches is planning a stiff fight against a national lottery to obtain revenue. The Federation has already received a number of letters from congressmen expressing opposition.

The International Sunday School Lesson committee has planned to change the method of temperance teaching in the Sunday schools by omitting the quarterly temperance lessons published for many years and plan that the subject be taught in many lessons of the year in connection with other teachings in the same lesson. Then, too, special courses of studies on temperance will be arranged for intensive study.

John Foster Dulles, veteran peace advocate, returning from a month's meetings with church and state leaders through the world, issued this statement: "The present war is largely due to the fact that during the interval between the two wars we were people without a religious faith. The first world war had exhausted the spiritual springs within us."

The three great religious groups—Protestant, Roman Catholic and Jewish—have become increasingly aware that they are allies in a common cause, and this is not merely the enterprise of winning a military victory, to which the vast majority of them all are committed as citizens, but the upholding of these basic principles of faith in God and man to which they are committed as Christians and Jews and upon which the meaning and strength of the nation's cause depend.

One day a citizen who had been drafted in the Civil War but who had secured a substitute was seen on Memorial Day lying prostrate on the grave of the one who had substituted for him. When asked why he had done this he said, "I want to remind myself that this man died for me." That is the real spirit of our annual memorial service; we need to remember that some one died for us in the birth of our nation, in preserving the Union, in securing the freedom of our country, and now, the freedom of liberty-loving people the world round.

Army intelligence officers on Guadalcanal offered a bounty of $100.00 each for live Japanese prisoners. Soon the soldiers began streaming in with so many prisoners that the army funds neared exhaustion, and a colonel questioned a sergeant to find out how the Nipponese had been so easily captured. "Oh," said the sergeant, "that's easy. Those marines out in the bush have not heard about this offer and so we buy Japs from them for $5.00 apiece.—Readers Digest.

COTTAGE GARDEN CLUB OBSERVES 'LILAC DAY'

Luncheon Meeting Held at Home of Mrs. G. H. Smith; Papers Given By Mrs. H. D. Smith, Mrs. S. O. Hoover and Mrs. O. F. Shively.

LILAC DAY was observed by members of the Cottage Garden club, when they met Friday at the home of Mrs. G. H. Smith, 825 Park avenue west, for an 11:30 luncheon. Assisting Mrs. Smith was Mrs. E. L. Robertson. The lilac is the club flower.

When luncheon was served, the table was centered with an arrangement of white daisies and yellow calceolaria. Mrs. S. D. Hoover and Mrs. G. G. Armold, a new member, who was welcomed into the club at Friday's meeting, presided at the table.

Mrs. S. A. Richardson, the club president, conducted the business meeting.

The story of Mrs. Woolcott, Ohio's Lilac Woman, who resided in Kent, was read by Mrs. H. D. Smith. Mrs. S. D. Hoover read a paper entitled "Care of the Garden," giving details of planting, transplanting and cultivating. "Practical Hints for the July Garden" was discussed by Mrs. O. F. Shively.

Mrs. W. H. Goodenough will entertain at the June 11 meeting. Associate hostess at that time will be Mrs. I. L. Bronson. The topic, "Diseases and Insects of Garden Vegetables," will be given by Mrs. D. J. Roth at that meeting.

HOROSCOPE

For Sunday, May 30.

Sunday's horoscope promises fair activity in needful lines where well directed energy should bring results. Also there may be writings, correspondence and short journeys. In certain ways there may be regrettable squandering of substance.

Those whose birthday it is may have a moderately busy year in the effort to put over practical objectives, probably on new ideas and purposes. Clever and constructive thinking may result in favorable outcomes. Be conservative and prudent.

A child born on this day should be clever and have practical ability and energy, which should give success if its funds be thriftily used.

For Monday, May 31.

Monday's astrological forecast holds augury of progress and steady growth in many novel lines, where ingenuity sustained by sound judgment and practical techniques are required. There may be little outside co-operation to effect results.

Those whose birthday it is may have the opportunity to demonstrate some unique talent of an original character during the year. For most satisfactory results it will be best to develop such ideas in private, without outside assistance. But sound and straight thinking should be industriously applied. Associations are prone to be deceptive.

Okay, Girls— Dust Off That Wedding Veil

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Features Writer

If there's a man lurking around your doorstep, or if you have a soldier, sailor or marine on your correspondence list, dust off Granny's wedding dress, girls—the chances are he'll propose this year.

The lowering of the draft age and the vast increase in the armed forces are expected to make 1943 a banner year for marriages.

What's more, there's a strong possibility that you'll be married in June, that it will be near his camp or station and that you'll support yourself.

Anyway, that's what the jewelers believe, and they have been busy preparing statistics. A tremendous postwar jewelry business is anticipated when more than a million homes will be established after the war.

Girls may do temporarily without all the things they've dreamed of—an engagement ring, shining silver, fine china, a grandfather clock—but they won't give them up for good.

In Washington Cupid inadvertently aided the housing shortage by uniting over 40 per cent more couples in 1942 than in the previous year. Even in nearby Baltimore, an aircraft production center, over 25 per cent more weddings were recorded.

Large cities such as Chicago, Boston, Milwaukee, Youngstown, Akron, Columbus and New York all showed a decrease in marriages because of the number of eligible men in service. In the south, where there is a large concentration of army camps, cites such as San Antonio and Miami led the field in 1942 with increases of more than 50 per cent over the 1941 marriage totals, while San Diego, the great naval training center, showed a marriage increase of more than 159 per cent.

Two-thirds of the 1,800,000 brides of 1942 were married to service men.

SOCIETY & CLUBS

Final Meeting of Bible Club Held With Mrs. Cole

Members of the Gleaners Bible club met Friday afternoon at the home of Mrs. C. A. Cole, West Fifth street, for the last meeting of the present club year.

One guest, Mrs. George Hoover, was present. For devotions Mrs. Cole, president, read a poem on the life of Moses. During the business meeting the club voted to donate the remainder of money in the treasury to the Mansfield Council of Religious Education.

The study period was conducted by Mrs. Ralph Peat, who reviewed the last half of the Book of Luke. Luncheon was served buffet style from a table centered with a lovely bouquet of lilies-of-the-valley.

The meetings of the club will be resumed again in September.

Women's Club Has Bridge Party

Mrs. Phillip Corey was in charge of arrangements, Friday afternoon, of the bridge party at the Women's Club, which was attended by 34.

Prizes won in bridge were awarded to Mrs. Roy Beck, Mrs. John Graham and Mrs. Austin Rhoades. Luncheon was served at small tables.

One bridge party a month will be held during the summer months. They will be held June 23, July 18, August 18 and September 15.

4-H CLUB MEETS.

Members of the K. C. 4-H club met at the home of Mrs. William Mertler Thursday afternoon. Six members were in attendance. During the business session, books, giving a detailed explanation of the projects were distributed. Discussion of the projects was held. The Misses Irene and Julianne Mertler served refreshments at the close of the meeting. Mrs. Mertler will entertain at the June 12 meeting.

You've Got Your Man; Now Try to Hold Him

By BETTY CLARKE
(AP Beauty Editor)

Dear Bride-to-be: Just because you almost have your man is no reason for you to relax your make-up routine.

Especially on your wedding day. Maybe you are planning to journey many miles for a simple ceremony at an army post or are having a furlough wedding at home. In any circumstances you've got to be beaming, radiant and lovely for the big event. A simple, natural makeup will help you look the part. Perfect for brides is a makeup scented with a thousand flowers — "mille fleurs," say the French.

After your bath, cleanse your face again. Apply your foundation lotion, blotting off the excess with tissue. Then apply your rouge, several tones lighter than the lipstick for delicacy . . . A soft mauve pink lipstick with nail polish to match which will give you a perfect harmony of colors against your bridal white. A two powder combination of pink and cameo tints will help give you a glow. An eyelash pomade to the lashes and just a whiff of bleu lavande eyeshade to the lids will have you looking dewy-eyed.

The "ahs" and "ohs" expressed by your wedding party will be a tribute to your skill.

Joan Leslie shows how a bride should look.

THEATERS

Opens Today.

Mickey Rooney is seen in his first real dramatic performance in "The Human Comedy," which opens today at the Ohio for a week's engagement. Rooney is cast in the role of a member of a poor family who goes to work as a telegraph messenger boy to help support the family after his older brother enters the army. "The Human Comedy" is a story of a typical American family. For instance, the Macauley's of Ithaca, Cal., are poor in worldly goods but rich in knowledge. Frank Morgan continues to veer away from his comedy roles, playing the part of a veteran telegrapher who gives Mickey many tips on the finer points of telegraphy.

The Desperadoes.

A sun-drenched frontier town, Red Valley, is the scene of Columbia's new technicolor western, "The Desperadoes," which features Randolph Scott, Glenn Ford, Claire Trevor, Evelyn Keyes and Edgar Buchanan. The film opens today at the Madison and will run through the Tuesday matinee. Into Red Valley rides Cheyenne Rogers, manhunted killer. He discovers he knows the town's sheriff; he finds the Countess, who runs a gambling hall, is a former childhood sweetheart; he falls in love with a girl, and learns that her father is the man from whom he planned to rob a bank. Trying to go straight, Rogers is caught in a mesh of romance and intrigue which lead him straight into a legal lynching. Other Madison picture is "Desert Victory."

At Ritz.

What a fighting man thinks about is clearly delineated in "Immortal Sergeant," the film-ization of John Brophy's novel, now at the Ritz. Henry Fonda, the star of the film fights his way in-and-out of more tight spots than he's ever before experienced on the screen. But what is he thinking of as he battles the Afrika Korps? The girl back home, of course. The girl is Maureen O'Hara. "Carson City," a Western film, is the co-feature.

Hit Parade.

"The Hit Parade of 1943," starring an array of favorite performers, opens, tomorrow at the Park. John Carroll and Susan Hayward are seen in the top roles, with Gail Patrick, Eve Arden, Melville Cooper, Walter Catlett and Mary Treen in the supporting cast. The nation's favorite orchestras, Freddy Martin's, Count Basie's and Ray McKinley's, are in the picture. Second picture is "The Spirit of Stanford," starring Frank Albert, Stanford football star.

STEALS FROM BABY

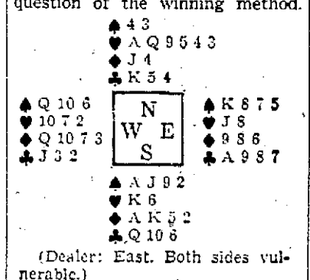
SAN JOSE, Cal. —(U.P.)— Mrs. Zela Hershey, a widow, is convinced that this city's "meanest thief" would not hesitate to steal the bottle of a nursing baby, drink the milk himself and then sell the nipple to a rubber hoarder. At least he stole from her five 2½-months-old rabbits that she was raising to tide her six children over the meat shortage.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay
"The Authority on Authorities"

CERTAINTY VS. CHANCE

Once in a while you get a hand to play which appears to offer several optional lines of action. If you spot two such courses, and weigh the relative risk between them, finding that either carries a reasonable possibility of defeat for you, take one more look before making your final decision. Maybe there still is another way to go about it, perhaps one which entails no likely danger at all. As between certainty and even the slightest chance, there can be no question of the winning method.



(Dealer: East. Both sides vulnerable.)

East	South	West	North
Pass	1 ♠	Pass	2 ♥
Pass	3 ♦	Pass	4 ♥
Pass	4 NT	Pass	5 ♦
Pass	5 ♥

That reaching out toward a slam put the weight on North—weight which he could not carry. He won the lead of the diamond 9 with the dummy's K, took three rounds of trumps and then played the way he had decided following his brief study launched by the opening lead. He had seen, as he explained later, the possibility of one trick to be lost in spades and either one or two in clubs.

If the spade 10 was with East, a finesse of the 9 would then set up a winning finesse over the K or Q if—and that made it a double "if"—those cards were either split or East had both of them. If all that worked out, he could gain a discard of a club and thus assure his contract. But a simpler "if," he reckoned, and correctly, would be to find East holding the club J. In that case a mere finesse of the 10 would limit club losers to one. So he tried that and the J won, assuring his defeat, with two losers in clubs and one in spades.

If he had looked just a little bit more before playing at all on the first trick, he would have seen that play of a small diamond from the dummy would have assured his contract. If it turned out that East held the Q, the J would have been discarded on the A-K. If, as was the case, West held the Q, he would win the trick, but then the J would be good anyway. After the return was won and trumps dropped, the diamond J could have been scored, and the A-K could have furnished discards of a spade and a club, limiting his losers therefore to one diamond and one club.

Your Week-End Lesson.

Do you know the provisions in the new Laws of Contract Bridge covering the following matters:

1. If a player makes a remark during the auction which discloses to his partner the nature of his hand, or his intentions or desires, or the presence or absence of a card in his hand?

2. If a player faces a card on the table or sees a card belonging to his partner, during the auction?

3. If a player makes a bid, pass, double or redouble after the auction is closed.

WOMEN'S AUXILIARY HAS REGULAR MEETING

Applications for Five New Members Are Read By Secretary; Group Plans Installation Service to Be Held at Eagle Hall June 11.

THE LADIES AUXILIARY to the Fraternal Order of Eagles held its regular business meeting Friday night at the Eagle hall, with Mrs. Raymond Fisher, the president, in charge of the business session.

Applications for five new members were read by the secretary, Mrs. George Berg. Following the business meeting, members spent the evening socially. Arrangements for the meeting were in charge of Mrs. Peter Herold, Mrs. Earl Stutz and Mrs. Albert Stutz.

Mrs. Earl Stutz won the victory prize. Prizes in hearts, in session at three tables, were won by Mrs. Fisher, Mrs. Mildred Burdett, Mrs. Berg, Mrs. Marie Hubner, Mrs. Dale Phillips, and Mrs. Fred J. Greisbaugh.

The next regular meeting of the auxiliary will be for the installation of officers and will be held June 11. A covered-dish dinner will be given June 8 for all members at 6 p. m. at the lodge dining hall.

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)
By ADELE GARRISON

"She'll be glad to see you, I know," I told Olina. I put up the receiver and turned back to Mary and Katharine with a question whirling around my brain.

"Are you sure, Mary—" I began, and hesitated. She caught my meaning instantly, and her ready laughter rippled out.

"Sure that Olina isn't hep to this racket?" she finished. "No I'm not sure. She's never said a word, and she goes through all the conventions of solicitous inquiry. But I've noticed a devilish twinkle in her eyes sometimes, and wondered. You've evidently heard a Satanic lilt in her voice—or something. Come on, darling! spoon the lentils!"

I repeated what Olina had said, and Mary struck the fist of one hand into the palm of the other. "That ties it," she said. "She thinks she's guessed my fatal secret, and is having a good time for herself out of it. Well! I'm going to give her a good time for a few minutes or so. Just watch me!"

Mary's Artifice.

She leaned forward in her chair, and opened a drawer of a cabinet which stood at her elbow, and which contained, I knew, all the little necessities of feminine cosmetic routine. Taking some issue and cold cream from it, she looked into the mirror, and carefully removed every trace of her very moderate and artistically applied lipstick and rouge. Then she dusted some powder over her face, and put a faint shadow under her eyes. When she had put the things away again, she leaned her head against the back of the chair and twisted her face into so agonized an expression of pain that I involuntarily started toward her.

"Mary!" I exclaimed in alarm. Then, with the recognition of her marvelous histrionic power coming to me, I reached out my hands to her shoulders and shook them soundly.

"Ouch!" she said. Then she grinned impishly at me.

"I must be doin' all right," she said.

Katharine Is Amused.

"You are," I told her, struggling to keep my own smile back, and failing, while a glance at Katharine told me that even her nervous dread of confronting Ruth Hayes in the early hours of the next morning had yielded to amusement at Mary's antics.

"Then don't you spoil my little game," she warned us, and scarcely had settled herself against her pillow again when a knock sounded on the door.

"I'll answer it," I told Katharine, and when I went to the door and opened it the length of the night chain, I saw Olina with the sturdy figure of an armed guard behind her. "Will you telephone the apartment, please Miss, when you're ready to return?" the man asked.

"Yes, I'll let you know in plenty of time," Olina told him, and as I undid the chain the man walked away, and she came through the door.

Olina Has a Complaint.

She was facing Katharine and me, and had not yet taken a good look at Mary who had distorted her face into pain lines again, and immediately following her greeting of us she turned toward the door and shook her fist in the general direction of the retreating guard.

"If I have to have him at my heels much longer," she exclaimed, "I'm going down to Bellevue, and ask them to lock me in their most de luxe padded cell!"

"Not that he isn't a nice guard," she amended. "But if you'd been under the eyes of those 'protectors' all your life, and then had had a taste of what American liberty is like, you'd know how I feel about not being able to go out into the corridor without somebody with a gun tagging you. Mary! darling! what's the matter?"

MILD UPWARD TENDENCY IN MARKET SEEN

Standard Oil of California Shows 22½ Per Cent Increase In Sales.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—Leading stocks displayed mild rising tendencies in today's early market transactions.

On the upside at a quiet opening were American Telephone, DuPont, American Smelting, Dow Chemical, N. Y. Central, U. S. Steel, American Car & Foundry, United Aircraft and Radio Corp.

Holders of oils were encouraged by the showing of Standard of California in the first quarter. The company's president, H. D. Collier, told share owners that sales in the initial three months topped the comparable period last year by 22½ per cent and that gross production was up 36 per cent.

CHICAGO—(AP)—A firm undertone prevailed in rye and oats at the opening today, but wheat was barely steady. Trade was light in view of the forthcoming holiday.

Wheat started unchanged to ⅛ lower, July $1.43¾-⅞, Sept. $1.44, and rye was ⅞-½ higher, July 93½-⅝.

QUITS WILLARD HOSPITAL POST

Superintendent 14 Years Forwards Resignation to Mayor.

WILLARD—Miss Gertrude Baker, superintendent of Willard Municipal hospital since it was organized 14 years ago has submitted her resignation to the board of directors.

Miss Baker, who stated no reasons for giving up her post in the resignation, is out of the city and could not be reached for comment.

Mayor E. L. Wolff, president of the board said Miss Baker's resignation said she would return to work Tuesday and would remain until a successor has been named.

but a few divisions is not promising.

"Best chance of success appears to be in employing very large forces, at as many different areas as possible, and as nearly simultaneously as practicable. It will be a great and difficult task."

In the cautious fashion of military men, whose plans must envision every risk, Lanza bases his estimates apparently on the assumption of all possible advantage to the enemy, all possible disadvantage to the Allies.

Two matters which are subjects of wide discussion by observers here he does not mention, perhaps because both are imponderables—the cumulative effect of aerial bombardment on Axis production and transport; and the suggestion, made in several informed but perhaps wishfully-thinking quarters recently, that Axis resistance may collapse—not soon—but suddenly.

The latter opinion, voiced openly not long ago by Field Marshal Jan Christian Smuts of South Africa, appears to be based on a growing belief that German military leaders are so completely committed to offense by training and experience that they do not understand and cannot wage a successful war of exhaustion, and are likely to risk everything in a final great offensive, probably against Russia.

Speculating on what might happen if Turkey joined the Allies, Lanza points out that Istanbul would be "a superb base" for invasion of the Balkans, and passage of the Dardanelles also would make possible landings on the Bulgarian and Rumanian coasts, possibly with the assistance of Russian troops.

his efforts to place all control of food under Davis.

Patman added, however, that instead of pressing for legislation to accomplish this objective, he might now go to Byrnes and ask him to make the transfer of authority. Byrnes' broad powers apparently make such a step possible, if the proposal meets with his approval.

The American Farm Bureau federation and the National Grange are the principal supporters of Patman's proposal.

Patman also proposes to vest the department of justice with responsibility for enforcing price and rationing regulations.

Administration groups seem to be divided on the subsidy issue and a clear-cut statement of policy from Byrnes appears necessary. OPA chief Prentiss M. Brown approves of subsidy payments, while Food Administrator Davis has declared that such a program will not curb price rises or prevent inflation.

Vinson Takes Oath As 'Stabilizer'

WASHINGTON —(INS)— Judge Fred M. Vinson, of Kentucky, today took the oath of office as the nation's new economic stabilization director, succeeding James F. Byrnes who resigned to head the office of war mobilization.

Vinson jokingly remarked that he was "smiling today for the last time."

HEARING OFF

WLB Hearing In Gas Company Dispute Postponed.

The War Labor board hearing in the dispute between the AFL Truck Drivers' union and the Ohio Fuel Gas company's Mansfield branch, opened at the courthouse yesterday and adjourned almost immediately pending submission of further evidence.

Hearing of the dispute which concerns wages and union shop scale was postponed until Wednesday. It will be held in the WLB office in Cleveland.

At the session yesterday, Dave Edwards represented the Gas company with Edward Laylin as legal advisor. Rudy Schneider, union business agent, represented the union and Robert Rex Pierce, member of the regional labor board, was the trial examiner.

worked out—from the conversion of big liners to troop carriers down to the supply messes for the tiniest tug. Never before has the navy been in a stronger position to do the task assigned it. The spirit of the crews never has been higher."

The striking power of the Allied air forces, which will spearhead any invasion, was reported by the British radio to have been acknowledged by Reichsmarshal Hermann Goering's Essener National Zeitung. The newspaper was quoted as saying that the Allied airmen were "so clearly powerful now that not only can they protect North Africa and the passage through the Mediterranean but they can prepare attacks against the fortress of the Axis."

(An NBC correspondent in London said the best qualified military observers in the British capital believe that the air onslaughts against Italy and Germany have gone so far that they would be a military waste unless followed up by a large-scale Allied invasion.)

Invasion Coast Gets Good 'Going Over'

LONDON—(INS)—The invasion coast of France was given a thorough working over today by British planes as other Allied aircraft continued to hammer the Axis in the Mediterranean in the face of mounting tension throughout Europe over possibility of an imminent Allied landing at some point.

The Axis, according to Reuter's news agency, was giving particular attention to the Balkans and the Mediterrancan, and it was said that Hitler had ordered guns from the French Maginot line established on the Adriatic coast of Greece.

Berlin and Rome were reported in a quandary and setting up heavy artillery guards at all points where they feel possible landings may take place.

Strong forces of aircraft crossed the Straits of Dover before noon today and headed in the direction of Boulogne after a night long rocking of the French channel coast by explosions and gunfire.

The admiralty made no immediate comment on a report broadcast by the German radio that British motor torpedo boats and German coastal vessels fought an engagement off of Dunkirk in the channel.

Dispatches from Berne, Switzerland, emphasized the mounting fear of the Italians that their Mediterranean islands soon may be brought under siege or that the mainland itself may be invaded.

An Italian military commentator speaking over the Rome radio, according to a dispatch to the Evening Standard, said after reviewing the latest Italian and German communiques:

"An invasion, at least against Italian islands, may be a matter of days at most."

The nerves of residents along the French Riviera were reported extremely jumpy. Numbers of the populace of Monte Carlo were said to have gone into the hills for an entire day following spread of rumors that an Allied landing was imminent.

Inhabitants of the southeast Kent coast of England experienced some of the most uneasy hours they have lived through in months as the coastal area reverberated with the rumble of explosions and gunfire heard across the channel from the direction of France.

The air ministry said that the fleet air arm was in operation off the Cherbourg peninsula where Albacore aircraft destroyed six Nazi "R" boats and damaged three others."

Planes of the fleet air arm operated in conjunction with planes of the fighter command to intercept and bomb a squadron of 12 "R" boats proceeding in single file off the Cherbourg peninsula.

On and off throughout the night heavy explosions, some of which were of a shattering nature, were heard and felt on the Kent coast. Houses on the English side of the channel shook alarmingly as the whole strip of coast facing the Straits of Dover trembled.

"R" boats are fast motor boats which carry torpedo tubes. They frequently are used in mine-sweeping. Speedy and extremely maneuverable, they are difficult targets.

Observers seeking the meaning of the activity said the best explanation was a combination of night coastal bombings by the Royal Air Force and a sea engagement.

Weather over the straits was reported excellent for operations.

The German radio earlier broadcast a dispatch by the official Nazi news agency, DNB, stating that British motor torpedo boats and German coastal vessels battled during the night in the channel off Dunkirk.

The enemy version of the channel fight said that one British boat was sunk and a second set ablaze. It was asserted that whole one German craft was damaged it was able to return with the others to base.

The admiralty did not confirm this report immediately.

The sorties by the RAF carried the new cycle of devastating nonstop bombardments against the continent beyond the 24-hour mark.

Nazis Claim Raid Attacks Halted

LONDON—(U.P.)—New and fierce Red army attacks against the Kuban bridgehead have been stopped, a German communique said today as Russia reported destruction of 66 more Nazi planes over the northwest Caucasus.

The Russian bag brought their three-day total in the area to 197 as the air fighting intensified.

The German communique said the Russian forces were supported by planes and tanks but suffered "serious losses" while 45 Soviet planes were shot down against only three Nazi craft destroyed.

Earlier German broadcasts hinted that the Red army had blasted new gains in the Kuban fighting.

Soviet sources still were silent on German reports of a big Russian offensive against the Axis bridgehead around the Black sea base of Novorossisk, but a Moscow dispatch said that the tempo of aerial fighting was increasing with the Red air force successfully frustrating Nazi air attacks on Soviet troop positions and concentrations.

Soviet planes were credited with shooting down 54 planes in dogfights northeast of Novorossisk yesterday and anti-aircraft fire was said to have accounted for 12 more.

Pointers on Picking Beans In the Victory Garden.

By DEAN HALLIDAY
Released by Central Press Assn.

To pick or not to pick is often a question which perplexes the Victory gardener whose mouth waters for a mess of home-grown beans. Often through neglect or from lack of knowledge the Victory gardener will fail to pick beans when they are at their best stage of development insofar as flavor and tenderness is concerned.

Lima beans, for example, are at their very best if they are picked while still young and green, even though small, as illustrated in the accompanying Garden-Graph. When the pods begin to turn yellow the beans are past their best stage of development and from this point on it is best to permit them to ripen on the vine for use during the winter months.

Another point to remember is that the flavor and quality of lima beans is especially fine if they are eaten as soon after picking as it is possible to prepare them for the table.

String beans, unless eaten when young, will usually be found to have become tough, stringy and lacking in their real flavor. String beans should be picked before the beans inside the pod have begun to swell, and while the beans, as illustrated, are still streamlined. At this stage they snap easily.

Pole beans must be picked continuously to assure the vines producing all through the season. If the beans are neglected and are allowed to dry on the vines the plants stop producing.

100 FORTRESSES RIP LEGHORN; FOGGIA RAIDED

Italy Feels Weight of Big U. S. Bombers In Two Damaging Raids.

ried out by the large force of Flying Fortresses from the northwest Africa air force against Leghorn, Ligurian sea port, 165 miles up the west coast of Italy from Rome and 440 miles from Bizerte, the nearest Allied base.

The rain of American bombs caused heavy damage to the oil refinery, docks, shipyards and railroad yards and sank or damaged three supply ships in the harbor, Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's communique said.

The shipyards may have included the Orlando works, which builds large warships for the Italian navy. Leghorn also is the site of a large naval academy.

The flight was one of the longest yet made by Flying Fortresses in this theater, involving a round-trip of probably 1,000 miles.

(An Italian communique broadcast by the Rome radio said that considerable damage resulted to public buildings and dwellings in Leghorn. There were "many" casualties, the communique said. The Italians also reported raids on Foggia and localities in Sicily and Sardinia.)

The raid on Foggia, 125 miles northeast of Naples, was made by a strong force of American heavy bombers, presumably Consolidated Liberators, from the Middle-Eastern command, a communique issued at Cairo revealed.

At least two parked planes were blown up, others were damaged and hangars were set afire at the Foggia airdrome, the communique said. Foggia is 440 miles from Tunis and 620 miles north of Tripoli.

Other Allied bombers and fighter-bombers from both the northwest American Air Force and the Middle-Eastern command subjected Italy's island outposts of Sicily, Sardinia and Pantelleria to further raids.

At least 21 enemy planes were destroyed yesterday, 19 of them in aerial combat with Eisenhower's fliers, boosting the toll for the past 10 days to 398, or an average of nearly 40 a day. Only two Allied planes were lost yesterday for a 10-day loss of 38.

Believe Italy Hunts Way Out of War

WASHINGTON —(INS)— There is a strong belief in highly authoritative diplomatic quarters in Washington today that Italy is now definitely striving to find some formula for withdrawing gracefully from the war.

It would cause no surprise in responsible diplomatic circles if Italy, through indirect channels, already has intimated its willingness to surrender to the United States alone.

However, there is good reason to believe this government is standing pat on its policy of accepting nothing less than the unconditional surrender of Italy to the United Nations as a whole.

It has been made clear to Italy through a number of channels that this is the only basis on which the American government is prepared to authorize any of its representatives to discuss peace with parties representing Italian interests.

It appears that Italians interested in seeing their country withdraw from the war as soon as possible believe Italy would receive much better treatment, and would, at least, be fed, if it was able to surrender to the United States alone.

ATTEND STATE TEACHERS' MEET

W. B. Huber, president of the Mansfield Federation of Teachers, is in Columbus today attending the Ohio Federation of Teachers convention as a member of the executive council of the federation.

Also representing the local federation are Miss Elsie Lockmeyer, Miss Emily Palmer and Harold Ramsey.

Dr. John L. Childs, of Teachers college, Columbia University, will speak at the dinner meeting tonight on "The Common Stake of Education and Labor in the Organization of Peace."
